Chavez Calls Budenz Liar Using Church As a 'Shield'

Witness Against Lattimore Termed 'Still a Communist;' Bigamy Is Alleged

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

Louis Budenz, purveying "un-American, un-Christian, dubious testimony" under the "shield and cloak" of the Catholic Church, "has been using the Cross . . . as a club."

This was the charge of Senator Dennis Chavez (D., N. Mex.), himself a Roman Catholic. In a remarkable speech yesterday to the Senate, Chavez said that Senator McCarthy's number one witness against Owen Lattimore was:

A liar, "still a Communist," a bigamist, guilty of sexual depravity, "a congenital conspirator," a hypocrite, an "irresponsible informer" lusting for sensational publicity, hostile to the United States Government and a consistent and "fanatic enemy of the normal and accepted forms of our free society."

Sees Danger to Liberty

Chavez followed his denunciation of Budenz, former managing editor of the Communist Daily Worker, with a forceful warning of the danger to liberty and American strength from the current fashion of lionizing and extolling former Communists and rushing them to forums whence they "denounce good citizens."

These days, Chavez said, there is a "public flogging awaiting individuals accused of the reckless crime of thinking. I contend that once you try men for the heresy of thinking you rob democracy of its intellectual yeast."

Senator McCarthy was not on the floor when Chavez delivered his hour-long denunciation of the Wisconsin Republican's star witness. Shortly afterwards, however, he issued a statement saying that Chavez's "exhibition . . . was as far as I know without precedent in Senate history."

McCarthy went on to say that "poor Dennis Chavez was apparently used and duped as badly on this as he was when he tried to amend the DP bill to permit the entry into the United States of a horde of Spanish Communists."

Cites FBI's "Reliance"

McCarthy went to Budenz's defense with the assertion that the Department of Justice and the FBI "have placed great reliance on (him) for his accuracy, his truthfulness, and his understanding of the vicious Communist conspiracy."

Chavez began his speech with a warning that at this time in history "we seem bent upon placing limitations on the freedom of the individual." The present period may go down as one in which "we quietly shackled the growth of men's minds."

Because "we have embarked on a course which breeds hysteria and confusion," Chavez said, he would refer deliberately to his religion, for the first time in his 19 years in Congress.

Because of the Catholic Church's unalterable opposition to communism, he pointed out, "any man who claims he is a Cath-

Rampaging Red River Floods Towns

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

TOWN COVERED—Small town near Winnipeg, Manitoba, is under water as the tide of the Red River swept over the community yesterday. The river at Winnipeg was at its highest in more than a century, its level remained unchanged for six hours. Estimated 40,000 persons, residents of flooded communities have taken refuge in the cities of Winnipeg and St. Boniface. Over five hundred square miles of southern Manitoba are under water

Nats' 5-Game Streak Halted At Boston, 3-1

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

Boston, May 12—Confronted by the bothersome Ray Scarborough, the Red Sox today produced a powerful counter-irritation of their own—Maurice (Mickey) McDermott, who delivered a 3-1 victory over the Nats.

The Nats' five-game winning streak expired from an overdose of McDermott. The spidery left-hander with his whooshing curve ball outpitched Scarborough with a five-hit demonstration, and the Nats' streak was wrecked in the same park where they have won only five of 34 games in four seasons.

For the second year in a row, May 12 was the Nats' unlucky day. Exactly 365 days before, at Detroit, they had a nine-game winning streak checked.

Scarborough wasn't yielding, however, until the seventh inning, when big Walt Dropo, with his third straight single, commenced the rally that undid the 1-1 stalemate. With two out, Birdie Tebbetts lofted a double against the left field wall to win the game and extend his personal hitting streak to 13 contests.

Except for Al Evans, who drove in their only run and collected three of their five hits, the Nats were a feeble outfit against the tormenting McDermott, who struck out seven of 'em.

Add to Evans' three swats a single off the left field wall by Mele and a bunt that Eddie Yost beat

Noren Doing OK After Operation

Centerfielder Irv Noren of the Nats had his appendix removed at Georgetown University Hospital yesterday and will be lost to the team from two to four weeks.

"He's doing well but will have to remain in the hospital for five more days," said Dr. George A. Resta, Nats surgeon, who operated.

Noren was taken to the hospital Thursday after he complained of being ill before the Nats-Chicago game at Griffith Stadium. Sam Mele has replaced him in centerfield.

60,000 Flee At Winnipeg; New Rain Due

Winnipeg, Manitoba, May 12 (U.P.).—A fifth of Winnipeg's residents had fled the flooded city tonight as rains threatened to inflict new havoc.

A total of 70,000 persons have been evacuated from Winnipeg and rural areas since the flood began a week ago tonight. An estimated 60,000 of Greater Winnipeg's 320,000 population had gone. More than 10,000 had left the area between here and the United States border.

A downpour this morning alarmed thousands of workers fortifying cracking dikes. Manitoba Premier Douglas L. Campbell said another rainstorm, expected soon, would bring disaster to this partly paralyzed prairie metropolis.

A fifth of the city is under water.

As rain fell today, raging rivers poured over great sections of the city and a 540-square-mile area stretching to the United States border. A fourth of an inch fell, raising river beds that were 20 miles wide in some places.

The muddy waters of the Red and Assiniboine Rivers, which weave through Winnipeg, and their swollen tributaries spread over 12 square miles of Greater Winnipeg, making it a city of islands.

The Red River stood at a depth of 30 feet, about 12 feet over flood stage, and a 3-foot rise was expected with more rain tonight and Saturday.

"It's the worst thing that could have happened," Campbell said. "Rain is our worst enemy now. More rain makes it a disaster."

The Army, preparing "for the worst," organized a committee to take over in case the entire city has to be evacuated.

Top German Red Ousted by Party Now Missing

Frankfurt, Germany, May 12 (AP).—West Germany's No. 2 Communist, Kurt Mueller, has disappeared mysteriously after being expelled from the Communist Party. A Communist statement declared he was an "enemy agent" for a foreign power.

Speculation over his disappearance touched on two possibilities—he was in hiding or had been whisked off to Russian-occupied East Germany.

U. S. Offices Face Shakeup To Meet Cuts

By Jerry Kluttz
Post Reporter

These are among other possible effects of the Taber-Thomas amendment to the general appropriation bill now before the Senate:

Some Federal offices would have to be closed, employe travel allowances would be cut by some agencies, projects would be canceled or curtailed, and many agencies would be forced to reorganize in order to do their work with fewer people.

Here's why Federal officials yesterday were looking into these possibilities:

The T-T rider would force all agencies, except Defense, to make a 10-percent cut in rent payments. And rents are going up instead of down. So, the only way the cut could be absorbed would be to close offices in rented buildings.

Travel costs for civilian employes would be cut 20 percent, and 5 percent for military personnel.

Remember this—last year Congress okayed a bill to raise from $6 to $9 the maximum daily allowance for civilians who travel on official business. Many agencies don't allow the $9 rate because of the lack of funds.

If the 20 percent cut is finally approved, the outcome is clear—either employes won't travel as much as they formerly did, or else their travel allowance will be trimmed. Last year's travel act also boosted from 5 to 7 cents the mileage allowance for the use of

Peace Rumor In Rail Strike Meets Denial

By Sam Stavisky
Post Reporter

Renewed activity by Federal mediators yesterday stirred up unconfirmed reports that a settlement of the locomotive firemen's strike was in the offing.

However, union officials denied that the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen had made a new peace offer, and management officials were equally insistent that the railroad industry had made no new concessions.

And last night Mediation Board Chairman Francis O'Neill, jr., said the strike is "just as deadlocked now as at the start."

The flurry of peace rumors highlighted the third day of the strike by 18,000 firemen against four major rail systems—Southern, Pennsylvania west of Harrisburg, New York Central west of Buffalo and Santa Fe.

More Than 130,000 Laid Off

More than 130,000 rail employes have been laid off by the struck lines, but yesterday all four systems were attempting to operate despite the walkout.

Most successful of the four, according to its own official announcements, appeared to be the Southern. Ernest E. Norris, president of Southern, said that 42 of its daily passenger trains—roughly 30 percent—were back on their regular runs, and that an even higher proportion of freight trains was in service.

Among Southern's passenger trains back in operation, Norris said, are the Washington-Atlanta express, the New York-Washington New Orleans express, and the through train from New York to Augusta, Ga., via Washington.

The Southern System further announced that it was easing up its embargo restrictions for a second time since the strike began Wednesday morning, and that it is deferring until Monday plans to reduce personnel. Some 16,000 Southern employes have been idled by the firemen's walkout; thousands more, including 1200 here and in Alexandria were to have been furloughed yesterday.

Locomotives Manned By Firemen

Most of the Southern's locomotives are being manned by union firemen who have refused to obey the strike call—according to the rail company. The brotherhood, on the other hand, said that the strike is 95 percent effective among its own members, and that if Southern trains were running, non-union firemen or supervisory help were working in the locomotive cabs.

Pennsy yesterday for the first time sent out several trains on the struck western tracks, none out of Washington. A 60-car freight train was moved out of Columbus, Ohio, under police guard. The New York Central and the Santa Fe lines were also running a few trains over the strike areas.

As on the second day of the walkout, there were reports of violence yesterday.

Southern announced on Thursday that two of its trains had been shot at near Knoxville, and that the brakes of a freight car had been sabotaged. Yesterday, Southern shut down its Knoxville division.

FHA Bans Apartment House Loans in High, Medium Range

The District office of the Federal Housing Administration has announced it will not accept new applications for mortgage insurance on elevator or garden-type apartments in the high and medium rent range here.

The ban on FHA mortgages for apartments in these categories will stand until demand for them exceeds those now existing, under construction or already planned, the announcement said.

The policy will apply to rental housing projects for both white and Negro occupancy, but will not affect Negro housing projects on which site approval has already been given.

A similar policy announced last November ruled out new applications for elevator or garden-type apartments in the "luxury" range of $85 a month and up for efficiency apartments, with corresponding limits for larger units.

Thomas C. Barringer, FHA District insuring office director, said yesterday his office is still interested in a "modest and very select program" of small size projects for the low income group, with rentals not exceeding $57.50 for single bedroom units, $67.50 for two bedrooms and $77.50 for three bedrooms. These rental limits include all services and utilities except gas and electricity.

A survey of the market for rental housing projects in the Washington metropolitan area shows there are 21,848 units under construction which will be completed for renting during 1950, Barringer said. An additional 9221 units will be started and probably completed by 1951.

Absorption of these units will depend on the current market demand in the particular areas where they are located, construction of large numbers of attractively priced two and three-bedroom units, and the trend of population here as influenced by governmental activities, the FHA official said.

Barringer said there seems to be a trend in demand in some areas away from one-bedroom or efficiency units and toward two and three-bedroom units. However, a number of developers are converting, or preparing to convert, to the larger units and this factor will be considered when new applications are made for FHA insured mortgages.

Hits 'Lunatic Fringe' Reaction

Fair Deal Opponents Called 'Acorn Thinkers' by Truman

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

Aboard Truman Train, May 12.—President Truman today lit slow fires under his Fair Deal opposition in Congress across the whole State of Montana.

Avoiding a frontal assault on Congress itself, Mr. Truman fairly smoldered at legislative shortcomings, "acorn thinking" in the Capital, and the unidentified "lunatic fringe."

"In Washington there are some men, no matter how hard they try, who can only see little acorns," he told a crowd at Missoula. "I don't have to call any names, you know who they are.

"Even give them a magnifying glass, or a pair of spy glasses, or even a telescope, they still shake their heads and say, 'I'm sorry, I can't see anything but an acorn.'"

During his first major labor speech, at Butte, he started getting specific about legislative holes in his housing, welfare and security programs. Putting it up to "you people," the President:

1. Complained of the "inadequacy" of some of the provisions of the House and Senate committee versions of the social security bill.

2. Told the crowds his proposal to build more housing for middle-income families hadn't "done so well but we are going to keep trying."

3. Reminded them he has recommended "modernization and strengthening" of the employment compensations system and voiced "hope" Congress would do something about it.

U. S. Can't Hit 'Saucer' Targets, Magazine Says

London, May 12 (U.P.)—A British news magazine today said flying saucers are real, that they are targets for American anti-rocket weapons, and that the British navy has new weapons that can shoot them down.

News Review said the saucers had proved too fast for American weapons, but that the British destroyer Broadsword, said to be a secret-weapons ship, would sail soon for Norfolk, Va., to try its luck against them. It said the saucers move at more than 1000 miles an hour.

Sanders Dies; Former GOP Chief Was 67

Everett Sanders, 67, former Republican National Committee chairman and secretary to the late President Coolidge, died unexpectedly in his law office here yesterday.

An associate in the law firm of Sanders, Gravelle, Whitlock and Howery said the one-time Republican leader appeared well when he came to work. He said Mr. Sanders collapsed at his desk in the early afternoon and died almost instantly.

Mr. Sanders, who served four terms as a Republican Representative from Indiana before his appointment as White House secretary, had been suffering from a heart ailment for some time.

Born in Clay County, Ind., Mr. Sanders attended Indiana State Normal School and taught school for three years before turning to law.

He was elected to Congress in 1917, and served four consecutive terms, declining to seek reelection in 1924. He was presidential secretary from 1925 until 1929.

Mr. Sanders, who had served as director of the speakers bureau for the Republican National Committee in 1924, was chosen chairman of the committee in 1932. He served until 1934.

Before beginning his law studies, Mr. Sanders married the former Ella Neal, who died in 1931. Five years later he married Hilda Ann Sims, a former nurse at Georgetown Hospital, who had nursed him through a serious illness three years previously. He had no children by either marriage.

His only survivors are his wife and a brother, the Rev. Bert Sanders of Hymera, Ind.

Funeral services will be conducted Sunday at 1 p. m. at Gawler's funeral chapel, 1756 Pennsylvania ave. nw.

Slayer of Wife's Seducer Freed

Des Moines, Iowa., May 12 (U.P.).—Dr. Robert Rutledge, convicted of killing his wife's seducer, was ordered freed from Fort Madison Prison today after a widow posted a $40,000 appeal bond for him.

The Iowa Supreme Court accepted the security offered by Mrs. Laura Rogers, Sioux City. Rutledge, a St. Louis children's doctor, was convicted about a year ago for slaying his wife's seducer in a Cedar Rapids hotel room. His wife, Sidney, testified the man Rutledge killed with a knife seduced her after a picnic. Rutledge was found guilty of second degree murder and sentenced to 70 years.

Big 3 Admit W. Germany To Unity Plan For Europe

West Emphasizes Rights in Berlin, Assails Russians On War Prisoners

London, May 12 (AP).—The Big Three Foreign Ministers today agreed on joining West Germany economically and politically to the rest of a united Western Europe.

Determinedly, they emphasized the decision of the United States, Britain and France to continue to uphold Western Allied rights in Berlin, rights protected at great cost through a year-long airlift when Russia blockaded the former capital.

They accused Russia of "a grave disregard of human rights" in failing to return the rest of her German and Japanese prisoners of war. Russia has announced completion of the repatriation program in each case.

The ministers pledged to do what they could to obtain information on prisoners still held in the Soviet Union and to bring about the return of the largest number possible.

French Foreign Minister Schuman laid his plan for uniting French, German and possibly other European coal and steel industries before U. S. Secretary of State Acheson and British Foreign Secretary Bevin.

His explanation added few details to what he disclosed Tuesday in notes to Acheson and Bevin. They announced approval of the intentions of his plan, but withheld final judgment.

The three Ministers talked seven hours, almost wholly about Germany. It is understood they agreed that no situations in Europe are very urgent and they were more concerned with long-range planning.

Particularly they were said to be looking to 1952, when Marshall aid dollars are due to cease flowing to Europe.

They appeared satisfied with their present German policy. It is understood the agreement on incorporating West Germany into the Western European setup was a projection of present policy into the future.

It appeared probable that any decisions about loosening occupation controls over West Germany—known to have been up for

Acheson Safe as Bolt Hit Truman's Plane

President Truman's plane, the Independence, was damaged slightly by lightning Saturday while in route to Paris with Secretary Acheson, it was learned yesterday.

The incident occurred on the first leg of the eastbound flight in the vicinity of Newfoundland.

There was no excitement, one of those aboard said, and the flight continued on schedule.

With the Secretary of State in the plane were Mrs. Acheson and John Sherman Cooper, Republican adviser on foreign policy.

BRENDA WOOD
. . . Condition critical

A 2½-year-old girl was in critical condition in Arlington Hospital last night with a rifle bullet wound in the abdomen. Her parents said they believe it was inflicted by her 4-year-old brother, Richard, at about 2 p. m.

The girl is Brenda, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Wood of 1003 Westmoreland dr., Falls Church.

The mishap occurred in the Wood home. Mrs. Wood hurried to the hospital with the child, and surgery was begun immediately. Doctors said the child suffered five separate punctures of her digestive tract. They said the outcome of the operation will not be known for 24 to 48 hours.

At the hospital Mrs. Wood said she was at a neighbor's home momentarily to make a telephone call and then returned to her home, where her four children were.

Three Missing Area Women Ruled Out as Slain Redhead

Post Reporters

Berkeley Springs, W. Va., May 12.—Police investigating the mysterious death of an unidentified red-haired woman near here rushed clews to the FBI in Washington late today to check the "best lead yet."

They ruled out the possibility that the nude body, strangled and dumped by a mountain road, was that of any of three women missing from the Washington area.

Instead, they pressed a round-the-clock investigation to determine if she was a woman missing from Akron, Ohio.

As the FBI made laboratory tests to identify strands of hair, a piece of rope, bobby pins, a dungaree shirt and some gloves found today in an abandoned car at Sharpsburg, Md., police reported:

1. The petite redhead was not Bernice Franklin, former Washington waitress who left town several months ago after testifying against several gamblers, John Fitzpatrick, Washington lawyer who came here to view the body late today, said it definitely was not Miss Franklin, whom he once represented.

2. It was not Mrs. Hallie Cobb, mother of six and wife of a Washington butchershop owner, who disappeared May 3 while on her way from work at a drugstore to her home at Waldorf, Md. Mrs. Cobb's sister-in-law, Mrs. Dorothy Fulks, of Accokeek, Md., came

Guided Missile Ship Rocket Soars 106.4 Miles for Record

A big rocket whooshed up from an experimental United States warship Thursday night and rose 106.4 miles into the air. That's as far as from Denver, Colo., to Cheyenne, Wyo., or from Washington to Richmond, Va.

Although the altitude was less than half the distance that man has punched upward from his earth, it set a record for an American-built, single-stage rocket.

The projectile is called a Viking. It is almost 50 feet long and 2½ feet thick. It was built for the Navy by the Glenn L. Martin Co. of Baltimore.

It was fired in mid-Pacific by the experimental guided missile ship Norton Sound, near Christmas Island, several hundred miles south of Hawaii. The destroyer Osburn was along to help photograph and track the rocket.

The rocket carried instruments in its nose to check on cosmic rays at high altitude. Those rays from outer space are particularly intense around the earth's equator, site of the experiment.

The previous altitude record for an American-built single-stage rocket was 78 miles, equivalent to the distance from Washington to Gettysburg, Pa. That projectile was an Aerobee, smaller than the Viking.

A German V-2 rocket fired at White Sands, N. Mex., went up 114 miles (Cleveland to Toledo). But a two-stage or double-header American-built missile set off from the same testing ground looped up to an altitude of more than 250 miles (Detroit to Buffalo).

'Lost' Air Force Plane Holds Up Airport Landings

A dozen incoming planes were held back from landing at Washington National Airport for periods up to an hour yesterday afternoon when an Air Force C-47 became "lost" on the way here from Baltimore.

CAA officials said the Air Force ship radioed its intention to land at National Airport shortly before 4 p. m., and that it was at an altitude of 4000 feet at Relay, Md., near Baltimore. It failed to appear on schedule and nothing more was heard until after word came that the ship had come down uneventfully at Andrews Field. Radio transmitter trouble was responsible, officials said.

In the meantime, the other incoming ships above the 4000-foot level were held at check points outside of Washington for fear one might come down through the overcast and strike the missing Air Force ship.

FEPC Cloture Vote Set for Next Friday

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

Senate Majority Leader Scott W. Lucas (D., Ill.) yesterday announced he will seek a Senate vote Friday on a motion for cloture to limit debate on the Administration's Fair Employment Practices Commission bill.

Passage of the cloture motion, which would actually be on a motion to take up the controversial measure, requires 64 votes. Southern opponents claim that Lucas cannot muster more than 54.

Meanwhile, Lucas yesterday denied there had been any sort of Administration "deal" with Southern Democrats to let FEPC legislation slide in return for support on rent control.

Answer to Reporter

Lucas' statement was in answer to a specific question by a reporter as to whether or not such a deal had been made.

The Administration leader not only denied the suggestion of a deal but said that he was confronted with the difficulty of being charged with not allowing the issues to be explained if he tried to invoke cloture before the Southern Senators had been permitted full airing of their objections to Fair Employment Practices Commission legislation.

Most Southern Democrats have been cool, if not downright opposed to continuation of rent control beyond the June 30 expiration date. Lucas is known to have expressed the belief that passage of rent control is essential to his own reelection from Illinois.

The languid character of the mock-battle over FEPC so far gave rise to Capitol Hill speculation that because of these factors a political trade might have been arranged within Democratic ranks. It was this that Lucas categorically denied.

Lucas said he would seek to invoke cloture (a move to shut off debate) on the motion to take up the FEPC bill and then it would be time "for the Republican Party to stand up and be counted."

Senator Olin D. Johnston (D., S. C.) took the floor yesterday afternoon in a two-hour speech to attack FEPC.

Earlier in the day Southern Democrats had been humorously suggesting they would seek to invoke cloture against the "filibuster" to prevent them from "filibustering" FEPC. Ever since the controversial measure has been before the Senate only a small fraction of the time has been devoted to discussion of FEPC legislation.

Senator Burnet R. Maybank (D., S. C.), a leader of the Senate's Dixie bloc, flatly predicted yesterday the Administration will fail to round up enough votes to cut off FEPC debate.

One member of the Southern group is Senator John L. McClellan (D., Ark.), chairman of the Executive Expenditures Committee which handles all reorganization proposals. He has on hand resolutions to reject three more presidential plans and has announced he will offer them if Southerners need breathing time. They are privileged matters and have precedence.

Dixon nosed out William R. Rice, 47 to 45, in the second ward. Also elected to a two-year term in Wednesday's voting was Town Treasurer Ralph F. De Simone. NLRB-Denham Rift Widens

By The Associated Press.

The split between the National Labor Relations Board and its general counsel, Robert N. Denham, widened yesterday and there were reports that President Truman soon may fire Denham.

An announcement by Louis G. Silverberg, NLRB information director, showed how far the you-go-your-way, I'll-go-mine attitude has developed between Denham and the NLRB.

In the past, Silverberg has worked for both Denham and the NLRB. In the future, he said he will speak only for the five-man board.

Silverberg said Denham plans to handle his own public relations hereafter. He added he was making the announcement at Denham's request.

Denham and the board, headed by Chairman Paul M. Herzog, have differed repeatedly on policy matters. The argument grew more intense when Mr. Truman presented to Congress an NLRB reorganization plan which would have abolished the general counsel's office.

Denham's job was saved Thursday by the Senate, which rejected Mr. Truman's plan, 53 to 30. But though the job was saved there were reports that Denham may not continue to fill it.

For Denham indirectly has accused the President, who appointed him, of a "flank attack" on the Taft-Hartley Act by offering the reorganization plan. Writing in the magazine Factory Management, Denham said:

"Mr. Truman's opposition to the Taft-Hartley Act is well known, and has been frankly stated by him time and again."

Still, Denham said all efforts to wipe out the law have failed, "so those who don't like Taft-Hartley have resorted to indirect or flank attacks."

Denham has accused the NLRB of being "pro-labor." It replied by trimming Denham's administrative powers. A test of that order may come over the filling of a vacancy in the Memphis regional office. The board has said Denham must get its approval on appointments like this. Denham has said he won't do it.

What happens here could lead to a showdown.

Flood Control Funds Are Cut

Senator Gurney (R., S. Dak.) said yesterday a Senate Appropriations Subcommittee has voted a 10 percent cut in President Truman's budget for flood control and rivers and harbors projects in the fiscal year starting July 1.

The President budgeted $798,482,000. The House last week trimmed this to $599,145,000, a cut of approximately 25 percent.

Effect of the Senate subcommittee's action is to increase the amount voted by the House by more than 100 million dollars.

The subcommittee's action will be subject to review by the Senate Appropriations Committee before the Senate itself acts.

"Our subcommittee decided to reduce the over-all amount for all public works projects handled by the (Army) engineers a flat 10 percent," Gurney told a reporter.

"We asked the engineers to make recommendations to the subcommittee as to how such a cut should be applied to individual projects, recognizing that a 10 percent cut would be too steep for some projects, which are in in a critical stage, and that some others could safetly take more than a 10 percent cut."

Postal Slash Stands in Face Of Complaints

The Nation-wide reduction in postal service ordered last month will go ahead despite complaints from various quarters, Postmaster General Jesse M. Donaldson declared last night.

In a 14-page statement defending the need for operating economies, the Cabinet official said most complaints were 'inspired" by the National Association of Letter Carriers.

In the Washington area the reductions are scheduled to go into effect May 20. The principal ones are reduction of residential deliveries to one trip a day, parcel post to once a day, trimming of postoffice hours daily and Saturday and late pickups of mail from street boxes.

Donaldson, angered by the statements blasting the economy order, said, "The postal service is not being destroyed nor seriously impaired."

"There is a widespread desire for a reduction in Government expenditures. Unfortunately, there are some who want Government expenditures cut, but insist the cuts be so devised that their own personal interests will not be affected," he said.

He hit back at critics' advice to make savings in some other way, declaring that 74 percent of the department's total expenditures goes into salaries and another 22 percent for transportation.

He pointed out that changes in postal rates are up to Congress; railroad rates are up to the Interstate Commerce Commission; airline charges are in the hands of the Civil Aeronautics Board and "there is no steamship subsidy included in postal expenditures."

Potato Growers Angry at Agriculture Dept.

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

Potato growers, from Maine to California, are mad at Uncle Sam. They are blaming a recent near-collapse in spud prices upon alleged mishandling of the price-support program by the Agriculture Department and on continued Canadian imports.

Potatoes were selling this week at only $1.85 per 100 pounds in Maine, in spite of an announced Government support price of $2.20 a sack, S. A. Wathen, president of the National Potato Council, said.

Kern County, Calif., growers, who last year and this refused to vote quotas on their crops to get price supports, are in serious financial trouble, Wathen said. The council last night closed a two-day meeting at the Willard Hotel devoted to studying the situation.

The California growers last year sold their early potatoes in Eastern markets for around $3.20 a sack, so they didn't need supports. This year the price has dropped to $1.60.

The council yesterday disagreed on whether to continue Government price supports. The recently enacted cotton acreage law requires strict marketing regulations on potatoes next year if price supports are to be granted. A law fixing those regulations is now on the Senate calendar.

Potato growers from Florida, Pennsylvania and Idaho argued they would prefer no price supports if they had to submit to the proposed regulations. All States objected to one proposal giving the Secretary of Agriculture power to reduce by 20 percent the amount of potatoes that would benefit by price supports at any time, even after harvest.

As a result the council voted (1) unanimously to oppose the 20-percent provision, and (2) let each State decide whether to support the entire law.

"There would be no potato problem in Maine this year if it wasn't for Canadian imports," Wathen declared. "Canada is shipping 50 to 60 carloads of potatoes into the country every day, and breaking our market. Believe me, the Maine growers are mad. They don't understand, first, why they are not getting the support price of $2.20 a sack the Government promised, and, second, why we are allowing foreigners to ruin our citizens."

U. S. Will Oust Many Of Czech Diplomats

By The Associated Press

A note demanding a mass ouster of Czechoslovak diplomats from the United States has been drafted at the State Department.

The demand, amounting to an order, is expected to be given the Communist Czech government in the immediate future in retaliation for the ejection from Czechoslovakia of two-thirds of the American diplomats there.

If the United States acts on the same two-thirds scale, it will mean that about 20 of the more than 30 Czech diplomatic employes in this country will have to get one-way tickets home.

State Department officials said there were about 67 United States diplomatic employes in the embassy at Prague and the consulate at Bratislava, of whom two-thirds would total about 40 persons.

Officials said the contemplated slash here—which is subject only to a final approval by top State Department officials—would result not only in a reduction of the five-man staff at the embassy in Washington but also in the closing of one or more of three Czech consulates, operating in New York, Pittsburgh and Cleveland.

The Prague government cracked down on the United States diplomatic and consular missions following the trial and conviction of six Czechs on spy charges. The defendants gave the Communist court testimony that four embassy officials had organized and aided spies.

What happened then followed a familiar pattern that has developed in recent months in eastern Europe. The Communist government took the position that there were too many American government representatives in the country and that some of them would have to go.

The demand for a slash was made originally in a note on April 28. This demand was repeated Wednesday night and according to reports received here the Czech government said it would not be responsible for the safety of American officials after that.

Ambassador Ellis O. Briggs thereupon acted swiftly to get the staff members who had to leave out of the country. Dispatches from Berlin said the first contingent of American Embassy employes left Czechoslovakia today for western Germany. This group numbered 10 staff members and their dependents, a total of about 30 persons in all for the first exodus.

Czechs Order British To Shut Information Office

Prague, May 12 (U.P.).—Czechoslovakia today followed up its April order closing the United States Information Service by telling the British Information Service to shut down by noon Saturday.

A note delivered to the British Embassy also ordered the British Council, a cultural organization, to close. Council representatives said they had "no alternative" but to obey.

The note, broadcast by the Czech radio, said British broadcasts and publications incited "antistate activities" and indicated a hostile attitude by the British government toward Czechoslovakia.

The demand came as 40 American diplomatic employes hurriedly packed their bags to beat a Czech ultimatum to get out of the country before midnight, May 17. Guarantees for their personal safety expire then.

Customs inspectors stood guard as the Americans put personal effects into suitcases and packing boxes. They were permitted to take only items purchased outside Czechoslovakia or those covered by export licenses. Many will have to leave possessions behind.

Poles Boost Rokossovsky

Warsaw, May 12 (AP).—Marshal Konstantin Rokossovsky, former Soviet army commander now in charge of Poland's military forces, has been named to the Polish Communist Party Politburo—the country's most powerful political body.

Announcement of Rokossovsky's elevation last night followed forecasts of a shakeup in Communist Party leadership. The unconfirmed reports circulating here ranged from rumors of sharp criticism of prominent party members to stories of purges in the offing.

Elected with Rokossovsky was Zenon Nowak—an old-time Communist—thus increasing Politburo membership from 10 to 12.

Europe Union Plea Barred In Aid Bill

By Ferdinand Kuhn
Post Reporter

Secretary Acheson still thinks it would be wrong and harmful for Congress to try to push the Marshall Plan countries of Europe toward political union.

He said so yesterday in a cable from London after a renewed attempt to write the words "political federation" into the foreign aid bill as one of its objectives.

The House version of the bill, as approved March 31, said the foreign aid program should promote "economic unification and political federation" in Europe. The Senate bill, approved May 5, made no mention of political unity as one of its goals.

This week, in the Senate-House conference seeking to reconcile the two bills, Representative John M. Vorys (R., Ohio) made strenuous efforts to get the House language accepted. But yesterday, in response to a hurried cable from Acheson, the conferees voted Vorys down and kept the words "political federation" out of the bill.

The Secretary's argument was that such words in an act of Congress would be resented abroad as political interference with independent countries. American policy since the start of the Marshall Plan has been to encourage greater economic unity in Europe, but to leave political decisions to the Europeans themselves.

The conferees on the foreign aid bill were firmly deadlocked all day yesterday over (1) the size and scope of the Point Four program for backward areas, and (2) Government guarantees to private American investors abroad. They will try again Monday morning to agree on these issues, the only important ones still in dispute between the two houses.

Cocked Hat and Epaulets Out In Navy's New Dress Uniform

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

The Navy has adopted a new officers' full dress uniform—patterned closely after civilian "tails"— and permanently abolished such traditional garb as the cocked hat, epaulets and frock coat.

Until now, Navy "brass" had their choice of adding a wing collar and black bow to their regular blue uniform or wearing their old evening dress uniform when stepping out formally at night.

Those in service before Pearl Harbor also had in the back of the closet the old "full dress"—little changed since the days of Farragut or Dewey. It included the ancient cocked hat, gold-stripes on the trousers, epaulets, and dress sword. They now can throw those away.

No Decision on Sword

Officials said last night there had been no final decision as to reinstating the sword, suspended by the late Secretary Frank Knox during the war. But changes in uniform regulations just approved by Secretary Francis Matthews give the deep six to the other relics of the past, including the formal day-time frock coat and the white evening mess jacket.

Possession and wearing of the new evening dress uniform will be optional until October 1, 1951, after which all regular officers of the rank of commander and above must have them. They'll continue to be optional for Reservists and lower ranking Regulars.

At the same time, the Navy decreed that the new evening dress uniform previously approved for WAVES will go into effect under the same terms as the new male officers' full dress uniform. It is an ensemble of matching shade dark blue, floor-length skirt, eton jacket, cummerbund, headdress and white tailored blouse.

Like Civilian "Tails"

The new male officers' full dress is identical with civilian tails except for gold sleeve stripes and buttons and miniature medals on the left breast. It is worn with the regulation cap, and the old boat cloak—reinstated for optional wear. Officers owning the old evening dress—not the "full dress"—may continue to wear it with a white tie.

Officials said the new uniform probably will be available through the Brooklyn Clothing Depot at just under $100 and probably up to $200 at top flight tailors.

Very similar new dress uniforms now are authorized for male officers of the Army and Air Force on an optional basis. But the WACS still have only khaki for formal occasion.

Big 3 Urged To Explore Union Now

Senator Kefauver (D., Tenn.) yesterday urged Secretary of State Acheson to explore the possibilities of an Atlantic Union convention at the Big Three Foreign Ministers' meeting now being held in London.

Asserting that the "piecemeal policy of containing communism has not contained it," Kefauver told the Senate the "cold war" situation demands "boldness."

"Mr. Acheson's meetings in London this week provide a near-perfect setting for his discharge of his obligations to humanity," Kefauver said.

Acheson is conferring this week with the British and French Foreign Ministers. On Monday, Foreign Ministers of the 12 North Atlantic Pact countries will begin a week of discussions designed to strengthen the treaty's operations.

Kefauver and 19 other Senators, both Democrats and Republicans, have introduced a resolution through which Congress would request President Truman to call a convention of North Atlantic Treaty nations.

Its purpose would be to discuss a federal union for the nations bordering the Atlantic. The resolution now is pending before a Senate Foreign Relations Subcommittee.

Kefauver coupled his request to Acheson with the declaration that Congress should approve the resolution at this session and thereby "strike a blow for freedom which will turn the tide of history."

British Planes Crash, 11 Believed Killed

Ismailia, Egypt, May 12 (AP).—Eleven men are missing and believed killed in a collision of a British jet Vampire fighter with a British Lincoln bomber over Sinai Peninsula yesterday, the RAF reported today.

The planes crashed in flames in the Egyptian desert east of the Suez Canal. The cause of the collision has not been determined.

discussion—will be given to the three Western High Commissioners to put into effect. Adjustments in Allied policy have been made without public fanfare.

Two Communiques Issued

The Ministers issued two communiques, one on Berlin, the other on war prisoners.

In declaring the Western Powers will "continue to uphold their rights in Berlin," it was stated:

"The three governments will continue to seek the reunification of the city in free elections in order that Berlin may take its due place in a free and united Germany."

Proposals to hold new elections in all Berlin have been advanced by both the West and the Russians, but there is such a sharp clash in the two sets of conditions for voting that agreement is unlikely.

The Ministers said Russia's announcement on the end of the German repatriation program left many German families "still awaiting the return of their relatives taken prisoner."

Russia "has also failed to repatriate numerous nationals of German-occupied countries taken prisoner during the war, as well as more than 300,000 Japanese nationals who still remain unaccounted for in Soviet territory," they charged.

Austria Deadlock Discussed

There was no discussion on ending the formal state of war with Germany which West German Chancellor Adenauer is advocating strongly. Western legal experts still are seeking some way for the Western Powers to end the state of war while still retaining some legal control over the country.

The Ministers spent 20 minutes reviewing their vain efforts to reach an agreement with Russia on an independence treaty for Austria. They decided to discuss Austria again at a special meeting before Acheson and Schuman leave London next week.

Regular Big Three sessions are to end Saturday. The Ministers will attend a conference of the North Atlantic Treaty powers here Monday and Tuesday.

Various leaders from the 12 member nations began arriving tonight for the sessions, called to study strategy and economics of the cold war.

Members of the pact, besides the Big Three, are Belgium, Canada, Denmark, Iceland, Italy, Luxembourg, the Netherlands, Norway and Portugal.

Schuman Discusses Pool

Schuman's discussion of his iron and steel pooling plan included a declaration it will not be a cartel. Europeans are not so sensitive ' ' this word, but they realize it has a bad smell for Americans.

Western sources pointed out that cartels are organizations of private business generally designed to restrict output and squeeze high profits from scarce supplies and monopoly division of markets.

Schuman emphasized that his idea of international control of such basic industries is to expand them and keep markets open.

Meantime, Anthony Eden, deputy Conservative leader in Parliament, said Britain "should certainly play a part in this important international development."

Both steel and coal are touchy internal political questions in this country and the narrowly empowered Labor Government has so far expressed a bare minimum of enthusiasm for Schuman's idea.

French Socialists Oppose Sacrificing Recovery Fight

Paris, May 12 (NYHT.).—French Socialists today fired a warning shot across the bows of the Big Three London Conference by opposing diversion of recovery funds for armaments.

This fire on United States Secretary of State Acheson's view that the Atlantic Pact states must shoulder an increasing amount of West Europe's defense costs came from the Socialist Party's newspaper, Le Populaire.

At the same time, it was reported the French delegation to the Atlantic Pact Council meeting in London would hold that military expenses must not compromise economic recovery.

Le Populaire said that if the United States succeeded in persuading France to spend a part of her Marshall Plan counterpart funds for arms, the effect would be to cut workers' living standards and strengthen the Communists.

The editorial was important on two counts. Its appearance, coinciding with the National Assembly's 420-to-180 approval of the 1950 military budget, indicated the Socialists thought the $1,200,000,000 record outlay was the limit for defense.

Only the Communists opposed the government bill to set aside 400 million dollars for the undeclared war against Ho Chi-minh, the Indo-Chinese Communist rebel.

The article was important also for showing that the Socialists might balk against reentering the government coalition if any effort were made to divert industries from recovery commodities to war material.

Socialist Ministers withdrew from Premier Bidault's cabinet last February to protest what they called insufficient wage increases for government workers.

Although their party has supported the weakened coalition, Bidault has referred to the necessity of Socialists again accepting their responsibilities in the moderate government standing between the Communists and Gen. Charles de Gaulle.

British Retake Seized Ship

Hongkong, May 12 (U.P.).—A British destroyer today seized the missing British blockade runner, Ethel Moller, from its Chinese Nationalist captors off the east coast port of Amoy.

A dispatch from HMS Cossack said the 500-ton ship was being brought into Hongkong with 150 Chinese troops and two generals aboard. The troops were disarmed and offered no resistance.

The Ethel Moller had been missing since February when it disappeared. A sister ship, the Edith Moller, was subjected to rifle fire today from a Chinese gunboat while sailing toward Hongkong from Haiphon. The Edith Moller was not hit.

Horseless Cavalry Now to Lose Name

Up in Valhalla, Jeb Stuart, Bedford Forrest and Tamerlane must have shed an unmanly tear yesterday.

For down in the United States halls of Congress legislation started on its way to wipe the proud name "Cavalry" from the rolls of the Army.

Is it necessary, you could almost hear them say, to so finally erase the trooper tradition from America's order of battle? True, the horse had to go, in these days of tanks and massed fire-power.

But though mechanization replaced the blooded steed, Cavalry forces and cavalrymen still remain. Members of the "Brave Rifles" out at Fort Meade still call themselves such and step a little higher because they are members of the Third Cavalry. Their battle flags bear testimony of the day when the regiment and others like it were the corps d'elite—the air-force and tankers of their day.

If the Pentagon-sponsored bill approved by a House Armed Services Subcommittee yesterday goes through, the Cavalry will be abolished as a branch of the Army. The old hard-riding officers and sergeants—now manning scout cars and tanks—will be transferred to a new arm known as "Armor."

Other changes proposed in the bill would merge the Field Artillery and Coast Artillery into a single Artillery arm and make permanent the many changes effected in the Army since 1941 under the temporary War Powers Act.

Navy Scoffs At 'Strange' Submarines

Merchant mariners reported sighting an unidentified submarine off the New Jersey coast yesterday, but the Navy commented that such reports are getting "just like flying saucers."

Capt. John A. Corso, skipper of the Socony-Vacuum tanker Mobilgas, and Second Officer Harold Mead told oil company officials they had sighted the sub 30 miles off Atlantic City, running south at periscope depth.

"The area is one of the graveyards of American merchantmen during the early days of the war.

"Navy officials in Washington said that no United States submarine was in the region at the time, but had no other data. However, a spokesman at Atlantic Fleet headquarters in Norfolk said the report was one of many, and indicated the Navy was not particularly excited.

"We get reports every day," he was quoted by the United Press. "Submarines are reported, even by well-trained observers, in lagoons you couldn't float a rowboat in. It's just like flying saucers.

"We evaluate each report and if the report looks worthwhile we send some people out to investigate. If we went out every time somebody reported a so-called submarine we'd need billions of dollars just to buy gasoline for the airplane."

Austin Hits Hoover Plan To Alter U. N.

Bound Brook, N. J., May 12 (AP).—Warren R. Austin, United States delegate to the United Nations, today said a combination of free nations can be formed without destroying the United Nations as suggested by former President Herbert Hoover.

Austin said in a speech prepared for the Somerset County Community Forum that the separation of the U. N. into "phalanxes" would end opportunities for pacific efforts among nations for settling disputes.

It was another reply to the suggestion of Hoover to reorganize the U. N. without the Russians or to create a combination of nations against communism.

"No action of ours should ever assist the Soviet Union to escape from the principles for peaceful cooperation contained in the Charter of the United Nations," Austin said. "And certainly no action of ours should undermine or disintegrate the unity that has been achieved in the non-Soviet world."

Chavez Holds Budenz Is 'Still a Communist' Who Has Been 'Using the Church as a Club'

olic is accorded special attention and authority when discussing communism."

Such a one, said Chavez, is Budenz; and the Senator said he was "compelled to identify what is going on and to protest not only as a Catholic but as an American."

Ancestors "Brought Cross"

Budenz has been speaking not just as a private citizen, Chavez argued, but rather "with special emphasis as a Catholic, investing his appearances and utterances with an added sanctity by virture of the fact that he recently went through the forms of conversion to Catholicism."

Chavez, a descendant of the Spaniards who settled the American Southwest, declared:

"My ancestors brought the Cross to this hemisphere. Louis Budenz has been using the Cross not as a Christian but as a club for his own ulterior motives."

Since Budenz has "deliberaty" set himself up as a tribune and public censor of the patriotism of his fellow men, Chavez said, it becomes necessary to examine his qualifications for that role.

"Budenz, due to geography, is an American," Chavez recounted. "He was born in Indianapolis. He married Gizzela Budenz in 1916 and was divorced by her for desertion in 1938.

"By his own admission of record Budenz entered into some relations with one Margaret Rogers while still married to Gizzella Budenz. This was before he became a Communist. He had three children with Margaret Rogers in 1934, 1937 and 1943 and then married her in 1945. He had some sense of decency once in a while.

"Under the laws of the State of New York, Budenx was guilty of bigamy as he was involved in a common law marriage with Margaret Rogers while still legally wed to another woman.

"Finally, to afford him some relief from the humdrum domesticity of two wives at the same time, he appears to have registered under various aliases in hotels in Pennsylvania, New York and Connecticut, concentrating his attentions on a certain Louise Gahen. Louise Gahen was Budenz' adopted daughter—a relationship which, though not directly biological, is supposed to, in our society, involve certain proprieties and decencies on the part of the parent.

Attributes it to Communist

"Budenz likes to attribute his sordid past to the corrupting influence of the Communist Party, but this is hardly correct inasmuch as his depravity reached its depth before he joined the Communists in 1935 at the tender age of 44.

"Prior to becoming a Communist, Budenz had lived a life that was actively hostile to established government and society. He was arrested 21 times. He earned his living as a professional agitator, stirring up and inciting others, and participating in volent assaults against the communities which tolerated his presence."

When Budenz left the Communists, Chaxez continued, he became "holier than thou," and "enjoyed and profited" from the sensation created by his stories of Communist conspiracies.

"I believe in clemency for sinners," said Chavez scornfully, "but with repentance should go humility, not hypocrisy."

Chavez mocked at Budenz's claim to be a "reluctant" witness before the Tydings subcommittee, where he testified that Owen Lattimore had Communist connections. A mere assertion or admission that he did not know Lattimore would have excused Budenz from being called as a witness, said Chavez.

"Remarkable" Recollection

"It strikes me as most remarkable," Chavez jibed, "that Budenz, who suddenly alleges, when before the microphone, that he remembers significant tieups between Lattimore and the Communists, never once mentioned Lattimore's name in the hours and hours he spent with the FBI, in his innumerable appearances before investigating committees, nor in the two books he has written—he writes books.

"Lattimore's name apparently struck an inviting note when Budenz saw it loom large in headlines and realized that public hearings were taking place without him. Perhaps Budenz is one of those witnesses who require the inspiration of an audience to tell his story.

"I do not know what motivates the Budenz type. But one thing I do know . . . and that is that Budenz has always, and is today, attacking the institutions of our society; first, as a Communist and then as an alleged anti-Communist, he still is against the Government of the United States.

"I call your attention to the fact that Budenz, who spent years in subversive conspiracy, spreading confusion and chaos in the United States, is still seeking to smear the United States Government, its officials and its policies by claiming that our very highest and most trusted and patriotic citizens were really corrupted by subversives—subversives such as Budenz. . . .

"Feels Sorry" for Budenz

"I feel sorry for any man who has become so imbued with the totalitarian way of life that he has become a political cripple for life. But the fact that I feel sorry for Louis Budenz does not mean that I must enthrone him as the superior expert on the very diseases of which he is the leading victim.

"We make a grave error in assuming that alleged former Communists are our best source of information on communism. It has become the fashion to lionize and extol the former Communist in America today. Former Communists are treated as heroes of the republic. They are rushed to forums from which to denounce good citizens who always opposed communism but refused to make merchandise of their patriotism . . .

"We are all in constant peril lest one of these people suddenly thrust the accusing finger at us. We cannot show our resignation from the Communist Party, never having been members. Therefore, by their perverted logic, we are suspect."

'He Still Is a Communist'

Senator Long (L., La.) rose to ask Chavez if he was satisfied that Budenz was no longer a Communist. Chavez snapped back:

"I think he still is a Communist."

Senator Ferguson (R., Mich.) repeatedly challenged Chavez to name a single piece of Budenz's testimony that Chavez considered untrue, and to state what facts he had for such a belief.

Chavez ducked a direct answer. He replied only that if Ferguson chose to believe a former Communist, that was all right with him. But, personally, he would not believe Budenz "no matter how many Bibles" he took an oath upon.

In his statement defending Budenz, McCarthy said the personal attack on him would not deter him from completing his testimony. For, McCarthy explained, Budenz "undoubtedly expected to be smeared and vilified when he dedicated the balance of his life to the exposure of Communists in places of danger to this Nation."

Attempt to Discredit Witness

McCarthy accused the Democrats of a deliberate attempt to discredit a witness presenting evidence to the Tydings subcommittee.

"The Administration spokesmen," McCarthy charged, "under the direction of the State Department's publicity men, are accomplishing a diabolically clever purpose.

"They are making it infinitely more difficult to obtain some of the witnesses who are less courageous than Mr. Budenz and who fear the type of cleverly planned, well executed, campaign of vilification and smear which the Administration is carrying on through its senatorial spokesmen, who place blind loyalty on party above loyalty to the Nation."

Chavez' peroration pointed to dangers he saw in the present "irresponsible and crude tactics" of dealing with the problem of communism in America.

First, he said, we are providing a platform from which "every unreliable and discredited individual can proclaim to the world that the United States is rotting with subversives" a situation that delights and is useful to the Communists.

Reputations Smeared

Individual rights and reputations have been smeared, groundlessly, and no restitution to the people injured is possible, Chavez said.

"The cement of our society is voluntary agreement. If we accept only 'safe' people the cement falls apart and we become a slave people . . . I am certain that the United States cannot gain strength from a population of 'safe' people approved by a Louis Budenz—people who have never thought or dreamed or spoken anything that is not prescribed and dictated by higher authority."

Finally, Chavez said, a situatiin is coming about where there can only be two opinions here, the Communist and the non-Communist. "And I object to the fact that we are elevating the Communists to the tremendous prestige of being the single opposition in American life—a success far beyond the wildest dreams of the small and puny professional Communist movement."

M'Mahon Convinced Files Weren't Deleted

Senator Brien McMahon, (D., Conn.) said last night he is convinced State Department loyalty files being studied by Senate investigators "have not been tampered with."

Senator Joseph R. McCarthy (R., Wis.), author of the Reds-in-Government allegations, has asserted the department loyalty files have been "raped" of material which would prove his charges.

"I have looked at eight files and they are very, very complete," McMahon said. "My examination showed that everything is in order. In my opinion they have not been tampered with."

Commie Leader Goes to Jail

EUGENE DENNIS

ITO Proposal Given Support By Hoffman

Marshal Plan Chief Paul Hoffman said yesterday the proposed International Trade Organization would help speed Western Europe's economic recovery.

The economic cooperation administrator told the House Foreign Affairs Committee that ECA's goal of putting Europe on a self-supporting basis by 1952 cannot be achieved "unless there is a very rapid development of trade."

Trade could be built up quicker, he said, with the help of the ITO which is designed to wipe out trade barriers.

Hoffman said restrictions of all kinds—"controls, quotas, tariffs, cartels,"—have "practically strangled" trade in many areas of the world. He continued:

"A good share of the reason for the difficulties of the Western European countries with which we in ECA are concerned is a direct result of this sinister network of restrictions."

Hoffman said there are some unsatisfactory provisions in the ITO charter drawn at Havana by 54 nations. But, he said, "We should take it or leave it now" rather than attempt to draft a new plan as suggested by some opponents.

Dennis, Communist Leader, Sent to Jail as Plea Is Denied

By Joseph Paull
Post Reporter

Eugene Dennis, secretary general of the Communist Party, was hauled off to District Jail yesterday to begin a year's sentence for contempt of the House un-American Activities Committee.

District Court Judge David A. Pine flatly denied the top-notch American communist any further delay in beginning the jail term.

Dennis was convicted in 1947 of refusing to testify before the congressional body, but was freed under bond pending appeals. On May 1, the United States Supreme Court upheld the conviction, with execution of sentence set for yesterday.

The Communist was recently sentenced in New York to serve five years for conspiring to overthrow the Government. Appeal in that case is set for June 21-23.

It was because of the latter appeal that Dennis thought he should not be sent to jail immediately. Dennis plans to argue the appeal himself, and contends that remaining in prison during the interim would hamper preparation of his defense.

Defense Attorney Joseph Forer argued that Dennis, whom he termed the "foremost exponent of Marxism in this country," is the only man who can adequately interpret documents involved in the appeal.

Judge Pine would have none of this argument, saying:

"If I followed your suggestion, a criminal could stay out of jail forever by committing another crime and then representing himself. Litigation at some time must come to an end. The time for the law to take effect is now. I think the defendant should be committed and he will be committed. I think the majesty of the law would be injured if I granted the motion."

Forer then argued that Dennis should get a new trial so that he might test whether there is an "implied bias" against Communists on trial when Government workers are on the jury.

Assistant United States Attorney Richard Roberts argued that in the Dennis case decision, the Supreme Court said that Government workers, by their work, were not to be presumed biased. Also, said Roberts, Dennis' motion came too late for the court to act on it.

Judge Pine ruled for the Government on both arguemnts advanced by Roberts.

Police undercovermen at the courthouse estimated that more than 20 persons in the courtroom were known Communists. Many of them came here from New York, it was said.

They tried to give Dennis two boxes of cigars as he was led away, handcuffed, to the cellblock of the court, but marshals said it was against the rules. There were calls of "goodby, Gene."

Dennis, a burly, light-haired and red-faced 44-year-old party worker, was silent throughout the proceeding. In earlier court hearings on the charge, Dennis had openly defied the committee's power to have him testify according to their rules.

He remained for over an hour in the basement cellblock of the court while he was fingerprinted and processed. Then, as photographers took his pictures, he was led, handcuffed to another prisoner, into the jail van.

His friends in the courtroom had disappeared. Only court officials, a crowd of marshals, and a few hangers-on were there to see him leave.

Douglas to Preside At Graduation of National Students

Associate Justice William O. Douglas of the United States Supreme Court will preside at the National University Law School graduation exercises on June 9.

Justice Douglas was recently installed as chancellor of the school and says he envisions it as a future national center for the study of public law.

He said the school has the opportunity to provide for the development of a "dynamic democracy" through its night study facilities for those who must work during the day.

Bandits Get $15,000 From Brink's Guards

Thompsonville, Conn., May 12 (AP).—Four bandits, concealed in the payroom of the Bigelow-Sanford carpet factory, ambushed three Brink's guards at 5:05 a. m. today and fled with a $15,000 payroll.

No one saw the robbers enter the plant, and no one saw them after they slugged and tied up the guards.

The bandits, who wore gas masks, apparently escaped by crawling beneath a fence, but how they entered without detection from 300 night workers was a mystery.

A Massachusetts sedan was seen cruising near the factory shortly before the robbery. Police saw no connection with the $1,700,000 robbery January 17 in the Boston offices of Brink's, Inc.

The payroll was brought here from the Brink's office in Springfield, Mass., 10 miles from Thompsonville.

On the theory that the robbery involved an interstate money shipment, thus making it a Federal offense, the FBI announced in Washington it had assigned agents to the case.

D. C. Man Is Poorer By Big $240

Charles Wittington, 26, 1365 Half st. sw., reported yesterday that he had a run-in Thursday night with two men and a handkerchief and wound up $240 poorer.

Municipal Court Judge Thomas D. Quinn held two men under $1500 each for action of the grand jury on charges of grand larceny in one of the oldest flimflam games known.

They are Frederick C. Russell, 38, 1405 Columbia st. nw., and Benjamin Beverly, 48, 1106 10th st. nw.

Wittington testified he met the two at the corner of 7th and L sts. nw. and walked leisurely with them to the 1110 block of 10th st. nw. There, he said, the two men asked him to hold $750 in safekeeping for them, explaining that they had dates with two girls and did not want to carry that much money.

They asked Wittington to show good faith by putting $240 of his own with their $750 into a handkerchief, Wittington said, and then stuffed the handerchief into his shirt.

The men departed. Wittington got suspicious, opened the handerchief, and found — crumbled newspapers.

Slain Redhead Unidentified

here with other relatives and ruled out that possibility.

3. Fred Jones of Chambersburg, Pa., saw the body today and said it was not that of his sister, Mrs. Gertrude Nolte, Carmody Hills, Md., wife of a Washington cab driver, who disappeared March 2 and has not been heard of since.

4. Sheriff's deputies at Akron, Ohio, said they had checked the description of the slain woman against that of a Mrs. Ercell Elizabeth Russell, 36, a redhaired divorcee who disappeared from her sister's home in Barberton, Ohio, in 1948. But they ruled out the possibility that it was Mrs. Russel's body.

Then who was the 5-foot 5-inch woman with short kinky red hair, with an "XX" scar on her forehead and scars on her abdomen from two operations?

Police were checking reports that a woman named Betty Lou Comber, who answers the description of the unidentified redhead, left her home in Akron 18 months ago.

This tied in with a report from P. C. Yost, former commissioner of Morgan County, W. Va., that he was driving south of Altoona, Pa., on Tuesday and gave a lift to a pretty redhead who said her name was "Betty Lou."

She told Yost, he reported to Prosecutor S. D. Helsley, that she originally came from a farm near Akron.

She said she was married and had four children, but was divorced. She wanted to get to the Pennsylvania Turnpike, where she was expecting her "fiance," a truck driver, to meet her, Yost reported.

"Betty Lou" chain-smoked cigarettes during the ride and "seemed to be very nervous," he said.

And she "complained bitterly of a blister on her heel," which she had stuffed with tobacco from torn-up cigarettes to relieve the pain.

Police considered this information their best, since the slain woman's right heel showed a large water blister, and since Yost has insisted, after seeing the body several times, it is the same woman.

Yost told police he let the woman out of his car on Route 522, about 26 miles from here. Her body was found on Route 522, just outside Berkeley Springs.

The only hitch in the latest clew, police say, is that experts said after the girl's body was found at 5 p. m. Wednesday that she had been dead more than 48 hours. It was only 27 hours earlier that Yost left his passenger by the roadside.

This lead was followed up, however, after an abandoned Plymouth sedan was found along the old Chesapeake & Ohio canal near Sharpsburg, Md. The owner said it had been stolen May 6 in Brownsville, Pa.

In the car were a dungaree jacket with a 3-foot length of rope in one pocket, two buff-colored bobby pins and several strands of human hair.

West Virginia State Trooper Charles S. Burke, Maryland Trooper Harold Basore and Sheriff Paul Munson of this town took this evidence to the FBI in Washington.

(The FBI in Washington said at 7:15 p. m. the three officers had arrived with "certain evidence" about a half hour before. The officers returned to Berkeley Springs with a message that a report would not be available "until the first of the week.")

Many Descriptions

Police said they had received some 25 phone calls, telegrams and radio messages from States as far away as Texas offering descriptions of missing persons, but none met that of the slain woman.

Meanwhile, police checked all possible leads to find a possible murderer. They speculated whether an escaped convict, believed to be at large in this area, might provide a clew.

The convict, identified as John Shriver of nearby Berkeley County, escaped from the West Virginia State Penitentiary at Moundsville last Saturday—his second flight from confinement.

He had been serving a life term as a habitual criminal, and authorities here say he is a confirmed car thief.

Shriver told his stepfather in Berkeley County about two months ago—when he last escaped—that he was "going to pick up a half-sister in Pennsylvania and a half-brothe elsewhere," police reported.

The trio would then "go South and form a gang," police said Shriver told his stepfather. The convict was later apprehended, but escaped again Saturday.

Boy Wounds Baby Sister

The other children are Barbara 3, and Susan, 6 weeks. She said she was cleaning in the living room when she heard a noise in the bedroom where Richard and Brenda were playing. She entered and found the child wounded.

When the father reached the hospital he talked with his wife and then quoted her as saying that Richard said, "I didn't mean to do it."

Wood said the wound was inflicted with a .22-caliber rifle he owns. He said he placed it, unloaded, on a shelf, 6 feet off the floor, in the bedroom closet about five months ago. He said that shells for the weapon were on a shelf in another closet in another room. He examined them last night and said the box appeared to have been "pulled apart."

Wood said that to his knowledge the boy had never seen him load or unload the weapon. He said Richard "climbs around quite a bit, but I didn't know he climbed that high."

Mrs. Wood, shocked at the mishap, was not able to talk about it beyond the first account she gave at the hospital.

Mislabeled Gas Fatal In Operation

Port Jervis, N. Y., May 12 (U.P.).—A patient died during an operation in which he was administered carbon dioxide gas mislabeled oxygen, District Attorney Clare J. Hoyt revealed today.

Hoyt ordered a grand jury investigation although he cleared the surgeon, the hospital and its staff of blame. He said he probably would ask the jury for a presentment urging State control of distribution of oxygen.

The gas was given to John H. McCooey, 53, railroad worker, preceding a stomach ulcer operation in St. Francis Hospital Wednesday. An autopsy revealed he died of carbon monoxide poisoning.

Hoyt said the firm which supplied the mislabeled cylinder of the deadly fumes sells to institutions within a 45-mile radius of Newburgh, N. Y. He ordered it to recall all recent deliveries.

Both gases are distributed in similar cylinders. Hospital authorities said it would be impossible to detect by odor which gas was being used in an operation.

Pittsburgh, May 12 (AP).—An ailing druggist laid down a newspaper picture of a girl's death leap and plunged to his own death today from a high bridge.

He was Elmer W. Haggerty, 46, of Beechview. His family said he had been ailing for some time.

Harry Haney, 25, a streetcar operator, saw the leap while driving across the Wilmot st. bridge leading into Schenley Park.

Haney said he saw Haggerty remove his topcoat, fold it on the sidewalk and place a newspaper on his clothes. Then he climbed the bridge railing. Next, Haney said, the man's body plummeted 125 feet to the ground.

Meanwhile, a prostrate mother could offer no explanation for her daughter's jump to death from the seventh floor of the Grant Building yesterday. It was a picture of the death leap of Jeanne Williams, 23-year-old night elevator operator at the William Penn Hotel, that Haggerty laid down on his clothes.

Bail Is Posted By Erickson For Helper

New York, May 12 (NYHT).—Frank Erickson posted a $50,000 bond today to bail out his accountant shortly after the accountant, tanned and rested from a trip to Florida, was held as a material witness in the Erickson gambling inquiry.

Henry Pellino, 49, who keeps Erickson's books, makes out his income tax and shares his office, surrendered to District Attorney Frank S. Hogan. He went "on vacation" May 1, the same day Hogan subpenaed Erickson's bank accounts and one day before detectives raided Erickson's office files.

Another material witness in the case, Harry Richards, 62, convicted bookmaker described as a $70 a week "dummy" for Erickson, has been in jail since May 4 in lieu of $100,000 bail which Erickson has not seen fit to post. Richards is reportedly cooperating with Hogan.

Alfred J. Scotti, assistant district attorney in charge of the rackets bureau, told General Sessions Judge John A. Matten that Pellino "has worked closely for many years" with Erickson and "many other bookies," that he has vital information and that his disappearance was "a peculiar coincidence." Scotti related that Erickson first went to Cairo, N. Y., and then to Miami, where he stopped at the Copley-Plaza hotel.

The prosecutor said that "while we regard him as a witness today, I don't know how available he will be "because of Erickson's "tremendous wealth." Scotti charged that Pellino furthered "the illegal enterprises of Erickson" and used his professional status "as an accomplice of Erickson in the bookmaking business," which grosses Erickson an admitted $12,500,000 a year.

Delaney said that Pellino will go before a grand jury at any time, "but I have been advised to waive immunity." After the lawyer conceded that a "vast amount" of Pellino's work is for Erickson, Judge Mullen held that $50,000 bail was not excessive. Pellino's name is on Erickson's office door, along with that of the latter's brother, Leonard J.

Halley Leads For Counsel in Crime Probe

By Chalmers M. Roberts
Post Reporter

Rudolph Halley, 37-year-old former counsel with the Truman war investigating committee, last night appeared to be the leading candidate for chief counsel of the special Senate crime investigating committee.

Committee members talked with Halley yesterday but no immediate decision was reached. Chairman Kefauver (D., Tenn.) introduced him to the other members.

Halley is now a member of the firm of Fulton, Walter & Halley, a New York partnership with an office in Washington. The senior partner, Hugh Fulton, was chief counsel to the Truman Committee during the war.

Halley, a native of Harrison, N. Y., is a graduate of Columbia University and Columbia Law School. He was an assistant United States attorney in New York before join-Fulton's staff with the then Senator Truman. When the committee in 1944-45 was headed by former Senator Mead, Halley was its chief counsel.

With what is described as a lucrative corporate law practice at present, Halley would be taking a cut to accept the $17,500 which the counsel's job will pay. However, it is generally recognized that the job offers one of the biggest opportunities in recent years to build a national reputation for a successful counsel.

The Senate committee members also interviewed Philip R. Davis of Chicago, who headed the war investigating committee legal staff during Senator Brewster's chairmanship in the Eightieth Congress.

Kefauver has indicated the chief counsel will have a major say in naming his assistant and others on the committee staff.

Paying For Water

The water bill which the Commissioners have sent to Congress may appear to be a retort to the $1,200,000 cut in the Federal payment to the District voted by the House. But we have no idea that that is its purpose. The city is faced with the unavoidable necessity of expanding its water system over the next decade, and it must have funds for such a purpose. Since Congress has insisted on taking water for governmental use without paying for it, the District has not been able to accumulate enough capital in its water fund to finance the necessary improvement. Substantial loans from the Government now appear to be the only means of keeping the growth of the water system abreast of the increasing demands upon it.

Delivery of water to the Federal Government free has been the rule because Congress supplied the funds for the original works at Great Falls, the conduit, and the Dalecarlia and Georgetown reservoirs. If this logic were to be followed, Congress would have to appropriate 23 million dollars to finance the needed improvements over the next decade instead of merely authorizing the District to borrow that sum from the Treasury. It is preferable, of course, to have the system financed by revenues from the sale of water, but this certainly means that the Federal Government ought to be paying on a par with other customers for the water it uses.

Recently one million dollars of the Federal payment to the District in lieu of taxes on Federal property here has been credited to the water fund, but the Commissioners report that even this falls $250,000 short of covering the cost of the water the Government uses. There is no satisfactory substitute for an efficient water system operating on revenues collected from all those who take advantage of its service.

Maritime Revolt

Advocates of all-out governmental subsidies for the merchant marine have had tough going recently with both Congress and the Administration. Perhaps the crowning blow was the indorsement yesterday by Senator Magnuson of Reorganization Plan 21, which would abolish the Maritime Commission and reconstitute its functions in the Department of Commerce. Senator Magnuson, who is known as a friend of the merchant marine and is himself the author of a long-range shipping bill, gave as his reason the mounting criticism of and unsatisfactory relations with the Maritime Commission.

This criticism has been building to a crescendo. Last summer the Comptroller General blasted the Maritime Commission for irregularities in granting overly large ship construction subsidies. His objections were upheld and amplifed by the House Executive Expenditures Committee after protracted investigation. The President himself showed concern over uncontrolled subsidies in his budget message. He translated this concern into action with Reorganization Plan 21. Now the Hardy Subcommittee of the House Executive Expenditures Committee is readying another report covering the entire subsidy operation of the Maritime Commission, both operating and construction, for fiscal 1949 and 1950. Indications are that this report will be even stronger than the last.

That suspicion of shipping subsidies has permeated the House is shown by the approval of the Thomas amendment to the omnibus appropriations bill putting a ceiling on the operating subsidies that may be granted by the commission. Incidentally, the House also deserves credit for finally knocking out the amendment by Representative Hale Boggs—which had been tentatively approved—granting an unasked increase in funds for maritime training and reactivating two closed training stations.

There is a reason for this rising hostility, and it is not that most Congressmen or Administration officials are opposed to a strong merchant marine. It is simply that a large part of the shipping industry—which despite a recapture clause enjoys substantial subsidies and even more important tax advantages—seems too anxious to shift more responsibility to the Government and to get its hand further into the public till, and that the Maritime Commission majority seems only too eager to help. For example, there is no indication that the commission has paid the slightest heed to criticism so far. In short, the confusion of the public interest with private interests is altogether reminiscent of the atmosphere which led to the famous Black report of 1935. Confidence will not be restored until there is a drastic shakeup and, more important, until Government aid to shipping is in the hands of men who are both disinterested and competent.

Schuman's Stroke

Mr. Schuman in outlining the Franco-German plan for an industrial union of heavy industry sought to head off objections that a cartel is contemplated. Cartel is an unsavory word. But it is also what Bentham called an impostor word, because it covers a variety of industrial combinations, some good and others bad. Take, for instance, the difference between the prewar rubber and the tin cartels. The former aimed at forcing up prices, the latter at stabilizing them, with a proviso for representation by consumers and for inspection by the governments concerned. Tin was thus subject to a quasi-public cartel. Much work was done at the conference leading up to the plan for an International Trade Organization to provide for even more public supervision in any future industrial agreements. But the word will continue to cover a multitude of sins in the mind of the person who remembers a particular abuse.

This newspaper has hitherto faced the name and accepted it in respect of the idea back of the Schuman proposal. For instance, on March 12, 1949, we said, "A cartel is the only feasible method of control of the really vital item, viz., steel, but also of laying the foundation of European unity." However, we understand Mr. Schuman's reluctance to use it and his effort to bend over backward in denying it. He gives his denial plausibility by putting a public authority over the producers and providing a place for the United Nations on that authority. What he has in mind is less industrial than political. It is nothing less than the "elimination" of the "age-old enmity" of France and Germany—an enmity which has flared into three great wars in three quarters of a century. Schuman has that statesmanship which recognizes realities, and the prime reality in Europe today is the German vitality, resurgent again even after the horrors and devastation of defeat. How to channel that vitality to peaceful ends was the problem confronting the French Foreign Minister. His answer is the old one: If you can't lick 'em, jine 'em. France is seeking a partnership with Germany, though an open end one, in which all Europe can find room for the development of a co-prosperous and co-peaceful Europe—an entity whence fear and jealousy and hatred and war preparation will be expunged. Only some such plan as his for the organization of Europe will do this, and it is a noble concept that deserves energetic backing on the part of the United States.

Yet, when all is said and done, this is a cartel, even though a good cartel. In spite of the fact that ownership interests would not be disturbed by the proposal, it would be a good cartel because it would be a public cartel. A cartel aims at control or adjustment of production so as to bring it nearer to the needs and possibilities of consumption. Mr. Schuman, to be sure, talks of the "expansion of production," and he comments hopefully on the development of the African continent. But, if this word is meant to carry the meaning of free and unfettered production, clearly the phrase is inapplicable. For Europe, thanks to some extent to the Marshall Plan, is already overextended in steel, as is stated in the last report of the Economic Commission for Europe. The ECE also foreshadows that there will be an unmarketable steel surplus at the end of 1953 of eight million tons. By inference Mr. Schuman could be seen as accepting this view of the European steel position from the phrase of his announcement providing for a "reconversion fund." This could be used not only to modernize plants, but also to scrap surplus plants. It is well to bear all this in mind lest misunderstanding arise over the justifiable effort to remove a stigma that would not belong to the undertaking but for the debasement of a word.

Shifting The RFC

The President has not only recommended a broadening of the lending powers of the RFC, he is proposing to shift it to the Department of Commerce under an executive reorganization order. We fail to see any justification for either proposal. With few exceptions private capital and private banks can provide the funds required to finance business expansion. Moreover, the President's program for small business financing is intended to provide for credit needs of this kind that private financing are unable or unwilling to meet.

As The Washington Post recently observed, it is an open question whether a company unable to obtain financial backing from private sources should be permitted to obtain direct loans from a Government agency like the RFC. Yet the President has recommended that the RFC be permitted to liberalize collateral requirements on loans to small business, and extend the maturity of such loans to 15 years. Another recommendation is that it be authorized to increase its participation with private banks on such loans—a proposal that means, in effect, permission to assume a larger proportion of the risks involved in making the loans. Instead of increasing the lending powers of the RFC, it seems to us that the time has come to impose tighter restrictions on its operations, if not to abolish it. At any rate, it should cease to operate as a financing agency except under unusual conditions when emergencies arise requiring prompt action by the Government.

Equally to be condemned is the proposal to transfer the agency to the Department of Commerce, with the Secretary of Commerce given the responsibility for supervising it and coordinating its financial services with the nonfinancial services that the department does for business. It is true that a large number of lending agencies are now under the control of various departments of the Government. However, we have never regarded this mingling of financial and nonfinancial functions as conducive to efficiency. The administrative head of a Government department is not trained to deal with financial problems, and his administrative aims may, and often do, lead to advocacy of unsound lending policies.

The Secretary of Commerce is not the proper person to entrust with the duty of coordinating credit programs, although there is undeniably a crying need for closer cooperation with the responsible agencies. The Federal Reserve authorities are primarily responsible for monetary and credit management. They are the officials who because of their special knowledge and practical experience ought to be assigned the task of working out a plan for coordinating the credit functions of Government lending agencies.

Mr. Lesinski's Muzzle

Congress has a direct and immediate interest in the penalty imposed on a local union president by the United Mine Workers presumably for obeying the recent court injunction ordering the miners to return to work. The local official in question, Lloyd H. Sidener, ousted president of the UMW local at Canton, Ill., told reporters that John L. Lewis "gave one signal for the court and public, and another for the men." If that statement is true, it means that Mr. Lewis made a mockery of the law. It may have a most important bearing on future legislation to protect the public interest against strikes in basic national industries. Yet Chairman Lesinski of the House Labor Committee has deliberately blocked an investigation of the facts.

It would be risky, of course, to assume at this point that Mr. Sidener's charges are accurate. He is said to have repudiated some of his earlier statements as to undercover signals from Mr. Lewis for continuation of the strike while the UMW head was publicly advising the miners to return to work in compliance with the court's order. But why was Mr. Sidener dismissed and fined by the union? Were any confidential orders sent out? Was a prior understanding reached before the injunction was issued? The affair cries out for an airing, and such an investigation could readily be conducted without interference with the contempt case now before the Court of Appeals, for it turns on a different issue.

Representative Jacobs' subcommittee, which is investigating undemocratic practices on the part of labor unions, turned naturally to the Sidener incident. At first his move was blocked by Chairman Lesinski's announcement that the investigating subcommittee was abolished. On Thursday the chairman reversed that high-handed order and then withdrew subpena powers from the subcommittee, which is scarcely less high-handed. This cover-up greatly intensifies suspicion that dirty work is being hidden. We are confident that a majority of the members of the House will resent this dictatorial effort on the part of a committee chairman to keep them and the people in ignorance. For the sake of its own prestige as well as the positive gain that would result, the House ought to find a way to reverse Mr. Lesinski and let the investigation go forward.

NLRB: What Next?

Now that the Senate has rejected a plan for reorganizing the NLRB in a way that would have enabled the board to exercise general supervisory powers over prosecuting activities, its operations are likely to be severely hampered so long as General Counsel Robert N. Denham remains in office. For Mr. Denham has been openly critical of board decisions. He has issued complaints that he knew the board would dismiss, causing a waste of time, energy and money on the part of the Government as well as private parties, and creating uncertainty as to the rights of labor and management under the law. As a result, the work of the board has been needlessly increased and its efficiency has been impaired.

The conflict of personalities exacerbated by Mr. Denham's disposition to play the role of a mentor instead of a cooperator is chiefly responsible for the internal friction that has interfered with efficient administration. The defects of the existing organizational setup call for a thoroughgoing reform along the lines of the rejected plan to remove the danger of future conflicts. Meantime the appointment of a successor to Mr. Denham who could be relied upon to work with the board instead of obstructing its activities would enable this "two-headed freak" to function with some degree of smoothness. We hope the rumor that President Truman is contemplating such a move is well founded.

THE NECESSITY

Fishermen have left their nets crisscrossed on the sand,
Ploughs tilt in the furrow, factory gates are barred;
Dark lies the land beneath the winter stars.

Still the living rise at break of day,
Bend to the floor, lace the shoe,
Pass through the door and down the unknown street.

Men say there is power in the coming of days one after another;
The coming of time brings death; the rays are long.
Yet in unknown winters men gather together, grow strong,
(In spring the sun returns with the green leaves of corn)
And many children are born . . . what else shall we believe?

Guess Who?

A true American am I
Far sounder than the FBI.
Where they leave off I just begin,
On all my enemies I pin
The tag "subversive."

My two-o-five and eighty-one
Will grow to take in everyone;
If any file does not agree
They've changed it just to anger me—
Those mean subversives.

The only Commies that are pure
Are those who've taken up the cure
And show me where to put the bite
Because they know I'm always right
About subversives.

I bravely named on Senate floor
As topmost spy this Lattimore.
A Voice informed me it was he,
But no one guessed it—only me
And ex-subversives.

You plead "not guilty?" Ha, a lie!
You ate a sandwich with a spy!
You work for State, so don't I know?
Besides, a Commie told me so,—
YOU'RE ALL SUBVERSIVES!

German Prisoners

During the period of Hitler's ascendancy it was frequently impressed upon us that in the matter of mass psychology we were the rankest of amateurs. Many observers of those early Nazi triumphs, achieved at such slight cost to Germany, would shake their heads dolefully and wonder why the democracies could not be equally adept in the utilization of propaganda.

With the defeat of the Nazis, despite their great ability for distorting facts to suit their own purposes, these observers shifted their admiration to the Russians, pointing to virtually bloodless coups in Bulgaria, Poland and Czechoslovakia. Recently it has even been hinted that the western portions of the Reich would be won for the Soviet Union in much the same way.

Reports of current sentiment in Germany cause one to wonder if the Kremlin is nearly so adept in the manipulation of opinion as we had been assured. Almost on the eve of a much-publicized drive to gather all of Berlin within its grim embrace, the announcement has been made that no further repatriation of German prisoners of war—of which 400,000 are said still to be on the wrong side of the iron curtain—would be undertaken. Can anyone suppose that the dismay, consternation and hostility this dictum reportedly evoked will promote the Soviet's cause or render more plausible its unending denunciations of the West?

It would certainly appear that the Kremlin has injured its case in Germany. So glaring an instance of bad timing gives reason to hope that the "inefficient" democracies may yet win the most decisive of all campaigns—the battle for men's minds.

Honoring Stepmothers

When ministers stand in their pulpits to remind us that on Sunday we pay special homage to our mothers, do they ever think of how many women facing them are stepmothers?

Do they ever stop to think how many of the well-groomed, good-mannered children, young people and yes, oldsters, attend Sunday school and church because of the influence of their stepmothers?

My plea is, when ministers prepare their messages for Mother's Day—please give the stepmothers of this world a kindly thought.

DOROTHY MURRY.

"Nobody's Victory"

Superficially, your May 7 editorial discussion of the Chrysler strike may sound entirely fair and reasonable. You blame management and labor impartially and mention strikes and lockouts as if they were equal threats to industrial peace. All this ignores the basic fact that in almost every case it is organized labor that has taken the offensive, using the strike as its weapon to obtain new benefits; that labor's demands are not limited by any discernible principle of equity (ability to pay is a criterion only when it suits); and that each victory gained will be used to get something more.

You suggest, in effect, that when new demands are made, the employers should grant all that their employes are likely to obtain by a strike—let us say at least half of what they seriously ask. The question is, what would be the end of all this? If this principle of endless compromise is sound, it ought to be applied to our international relations. It surely favors that quality of "dynamism" so highly valued by our late enemies and practiced by our friends of the Kremlin. Also it will assure continuing inflation. EDWARD GRAY.

Recognition of Spain

It might be too long to nurse as a grudge, but Spain has always been the historic enemy of the United States. It was the only country in continental Europe that was contemptuous of American independence. Let us take as long to extend full recognition to her exotic government as she hesitated over the first democratic one. I quote Franklin: "Spain has taken four years to consider whether she should treat with us or not. Give her 40 and in the meantime mind our own business." "Mind our own business" might still be Franklin's advice today instead of United States coming to the aid of every outrageous regime on earth. G. L. REES.

Hatch Act Amendment

The Federal employe in nearby Virginia and Maryland would do well to unravel the complicated and tangled implications of the Stennis amendment to the Hatch Act. So complicated, so confusing, and so menacing are the implications of the Stennis amendment provisions that his civic and community life is actually at stake, although he knows it not.

All over the country the desirability of a restudy of partisan political activity of Federal employes is being advanced. This is a legitimate demand. Whatever the results would be of such a thorough and professional study of the Federal employes position in the local political arena, the employes themselves deserve, and indeed must have, adequate and specific protection from coercion, intimidation, and loss of employment from possible change of administration at the top levels.

The Stennis amendment, while seeming to ride on the wave of national reconsideration of the Hatch Act restrictions, contains none of the necessary protections. Without security protections, the rights granted under this amendment are empty and useless. The Stennis amendment, moreover, was conceived in a back room, tacked on as a rider to an open and respectable bill, advanced without adequate study, and passed to its present position without public hearings to which the group most affected, the Federal employes, were invited to state their views and to make suggestions.

The Virginia "party plan," moreover, itself makes dim and uncertain the line between local and State offices. Let us examine the difficulties faced by a Federal employe, for instance, who wishes to run for the Arlington Democratic executive committee, a precinct office of great significance. In order to file for election as party precinct committeeman, the Federal employe must swear on his sacred honor that he supported all of the regular nominees of the party in the last general election, and will support all of the regular nominees of the party in the next general election. He has, therefore, obligated himself to support nominees of the party on congressional and State levels. These are not local offices. On filing for a precinct office, under these conditions, be interpreted as filing for a "local" office?

The second great force that struggles for the civic and community soul of the Federal employe in Virginia is the Byrd organization itself. The "machine" in Virginia, although still in control, has never been so seriously threatened by the demands of Virginia's citizens for a more democratic government. The union of antiorganization factions, so long kept sectional and scattered and ineffective, is now taking place. An important unit of that factional group lies in northern Virginia.

Arlington, with its enormous Federal employe population, chose the nonpartisan way to revitalize its local government and services. Local government and services have been revitalized.

Nonpartisan local government has been accepted throughout the United States as the good-government way, accepted in thousands of cities where Federal employment is nonexistant. Nowhere has it endangered the grass-roots of our two great political parties. Nonpartisan local government does endanger the grass-roots control of any political machine, since it removes from the hands of machine-bosses the means of petty political patronage hand-outs that keep machine hacks active on a local level.

The Stennis amendment gives the Civil Service Commission discretion to decide whether the Federal employe in Maryland and Virginia may be active on a partisan basis, or whether he shall be completely inactive in every way, partisan and nonpartisan. If the commission opens the door to all partisan political activity with no safeguards for the protection of the Federal employe, tens of thousands of fine men and women will be thrown to the wolves, unprotected and confused. If the Civil Service Commission rules no political activity even on a nonpartisan basis, it will be handing Arlington County back to the group who have failed miserably to meet the needs of the citizens, who have been found wanting over and over again at the polls. The amendment places an impossible burden upon the commission, and forces, unasked and undesired, a futile and ineffective role upon the Federal employe in his efforts to better his home community.

Will to Fail—Then and Now

By Malvina Lindsay

Lesson From 1787

ON ABOUT this day in May, 183 years ago, George Washington, weary from his long horseback ride from Virginia, arrived in Philadelphia for the Constitutional Convention. Not until May 25, more than two weeks later, did enough delegates straggle in for a bare quorum.

During that wait, Washington must often have wondered if anything ever would come of this "bold, dramatic move" initiated by Alexander Hamilton. Today it is easy to imagine what the pseudo realists and the defeatists of that day were telling him.

For we hear them carping on all sides, "What's the use?"—as Trygve Lie goes to Moscow in a new effort to ease the cold war, save the United Nations . . . as Secretary Acheson, reinforced by the brickbats rather than the prayers of his countrymen, meets with Western Foreign Ministers to build up "situations of strength" . . . as there is widespread call for something more than the sterile answer of a hydrogen bomb to present national peril.

TUNING OUR ears to the sound waves of 1787, we can hear that early-day isolationist, Hezekieh Blink, saying something like this:

"No use, General, waiting around. These delegates will never show up. The States will never get together. Look how they're fighting among themselves! Pennsylvania and Vermont ready to go to war over boundaries. Virginia and Maryland at each other's throats about the Potomac.

"They're even fighting inside their borders—Shays' Rebellion in Massachusetts, poor whites on rampage against the nabobs in South Carolina. Twelve to 15,000 Communists in New England alone wanting all the property divided. And look at the currency mess!

"I tell you, General, any smart State's going to think twice before getting mixed up in all this. And what State can you name that'll give up a shred of its sovereignty. Better forget this whole crazy scheme of a Federal Union, General. Go home and build up Virginia. Get a militia that can lick anybody!"

OR WE can hear the eighteenth century realist, Rufus Hardpann, pontificating thus: "Now General, you've got to look facts in the face. This is all a very fine dream of Hamilton's but it lacks realism. It's fuzzy-minded. Now as a practical man, you know these States are going to keep on fighting each other. Look at Europe! Human nature's the same everywhere. Anyway, General, the time's not ripe for such a radical step.

"Now what you ought to do, General, is to go home and make some money. Cash in your prestige in selling your tobacco. Now's the time if ever. You say yourself your estates aren't making ends meet. You've done enough for your country."

Or we can hear Timothy Carp, the perennial defeatist, whining in Washington's ear:

"I tell you it'll never work! Rhode Island won't ever come in. South Carolina won't stay in. Your own State won't ratify. Patrick Henry wouldn't be a delegate to this convention. He'll stir up all the rabble against any constitution you try. And what if the States do sign up? They won't keep their words."

OR EVEN the ubiquitous gossip, Phineas Snipe, may have gotten Washington's ear to say this:

"Better drop the whole thing, General. It's tricky! I have it from sources I can't divulge that the Tories have infiltrated the whole convention. There's a top stooge for England among the delegates! The big plot is to weaken the strong States like Virginia—get 'em tied up in a Federal mess. Then the British will take over. There's even talk that—well this is strictly between us—but some people who ought to know aren't so sure any more of—of Franklin himself!"

But whatever talk along this line Washington may have heard he did not weaken. As Poor Adam's Almanack, in the magazine Freedom and Union, comments: "A lesser dignitary would have gone home in humiliation and despair — and with him would have gone the hopes of union then and now."

True, today's national dilemmas seem to dwarf those of 1787. They may not be comparable in many respects. But the old battle of the will to fail versus the will to succeed is being fought over again in much the same pattern.

Transit Pass Count

As a passenger of the Capitol Transit Co. six days a week I am very much interested in the transit company's application for higher fares. Just how does the company arrive at their figures for the number of times a pass is used? Can it be that they seriously believe the mechanical counters attached to the fare boxes for the use of the operator in counting pass riders is accurate? I have a great number of times noticed operators register one pass holder four and five times when he boards the vehicle. Can that be accurate?

Missouri Vote Fraud

By Marquis Childs

States' Rights vs. Federal Probe

MAY 27 is a date with a ring around it on the political calendar. On that date in 1947 the evidence on which 72 henchmen in Kansas City's Pendergast machine had been indicted was blasted out of a safe and disappeared.

Childs

The evidence has never been recovered and no one has ever been prosecuted for that theft. Presumably, on the coming May 27 the statute of limitations will have run and it will no longer be possible to punish the guilty even if they should be caught. The Department of Justice suggests there is some doubt about whether the three-year limit will apply in this instance.

Challenged by President Truman's reference to Teapot Dome, Republicans in the Senate have been hammering away at the Missouri vote frauds. One of Missouri's two Republican Senators, James Kem, recited the facts, going back to Harry Truman's first primary race for the Senate in 1934. As was widely known in Missouri at the time, the Pendergast machine supplied the votes to count out the real winner in that primary, an able public servant, the late Congressman John J. Cochran.

A LITTLE statistical research would probably show that the number of words spoken by Kem on the Kansas City scandals during his four years in the Senate would reach from the earth to the moon and back again. While this barrage had little effect in 1948, when Truman carried Missouri by a majority of 250,000, it could be most effective in a congressional election, where national issues are not so conspicuous. Kem some time ago wrote to Attorney General J. Howard McGrath demanding to know why the theft of the evidence in the vote fraud had not been solved. In reply McGrath wrote:

"As you know, the general subject of this primary election was intensively investigated by the Federal Bureau of Investigation. From the standpoint of time, money and manpower expended, it was an extremely large-scale investigation. It included an exhaustive inquiry into the ballot theft even though Federal jurisdiction over such a taking from State custody was doubtful.

"The Government was unsuccessful, despite its concentrated efforts, in establishing the identity of those implicated in the theft of the ballots. The investigation of the FBI, however, has at all times remained on an active basis and is still continuing. In the event that evidence establishing the commission of a Federal offense by any individual is obtained, you may be assured that the department will take immediate and appropriate action."

This letter, which neither Kem nor the Attorney General gave out, naturally did not satisfy the Senator from Missouri. He wants action—indictments and convictions—before it is too late to take such action.

But one point in McGrath's letter raises an interesting question. That concerns the right of the Federal Government to intervene. The stolen votes showing the alleged fraud were cast in the State Democratic primary race in which former Representative Roger Slaughter was "purged."

While the office was a national one, it was a State election. And ardent States' Righters have insisted over and over that the Federal Government has no authority over the rules and conduct of State elections.

KEM, himself, is a relentless foe of any form of Federal intervention in welfare and economic issues, yet he wants the FBI to purge Kansas City of corrupt bossism.

This seeming inconsistency is the subject of a sharp editorial in the current issue of America, the national Catholic weekly review. The editorial points out that in his sermon at the funeral of the murdered boss-gangster, Charles Binaggio, Father Raymond E. Jackson condemned not alone the underworld but "the overworld liquor executives, public officials in high and low places and the like" in league with racketeers. America comments:

"Why is it that disgraceful conditions like those charged by the Federal grand jury are permitted to burgeon in a city the size of Kansas City? Are the people who keep harping on 'socialism,' 'bureaucracy,' and 'overcentralization of Government in Washington' as the great 'menace' to American democracy completely blind to the corruption going on under their noses? . . . They ought to remember that national political parties are built on State and local political organizations. Reform should begin at the bottom where people live and do business . . ."

One thing is sure. On May 27 and at least right up until November 7 we are going to hear a lot more about those vote frauds.

Mining Togs for Truman

3000 Democrats Gathering For Truman Rally at Chicago

Chicago, May 12 (AP).—Democrats flocked into Chicago tonight for an unprecedented political festival and a gala stadium show starring President Truman.

Two days of conferences on election campaign issues and strategy will keep more than 3000 high ranking politicians busy tomorrow and Sunday.

Then, after a round of luncheons and dinners and hotel room powwows, the three-day session will be climaxed with a spectacular welcome to Mr. Truman and a major speech by him.

The 15-event program will start tomorrow morning. It will be held in halls at three hotels, the civic opera house, and the stadium.

It is the biggest Democratic shindig since the 1948 national convention at Philadelphia. All States and Territories will be represented.

Party leaders expect close to 500,000 persons will turn out Monday night to get a glimpse of Mr. Truman. He will go to the stadium from the Blackstone Hotel in a colorful, torchlight parade led by Gene Autry.

The occasion for the three-day jamboree is a civic observance of the 150th anniversary of Thomas Jefferson's election as President.

From a non-partisan standpoint, it is billed as a "Jefferson Jubilee," financed by $250,000 contributed by both Republicans and Democrats in Chicago.

But the Jeffersonian pageantry Monday will be preceded by two full days of confabs, arranged by the Democratic National Committee.

President Truman will arrive late Sunday night, on his tour of the West. His stadium speech will be broadcast and televised.

By Sunday most of the Truman Administration's top officers will be in Chicago. So will the bulk of the party's most important politicians, including Congressmen, governors and mayors.

Even more unusual will be a public meeting of the President's Cabinet members Sunday afternoon at the opera house. All members except Secretary of State Acheson will be there to make "reports." Acheson is in Europe.

Tomorrow's first events are a meeting of the Democratic National Committee, headed by William M. Boyle, jr., chairman, and a luncheon for leaders of the party's women's division.

The outlook for the 1950 congressional election campaign will be the main topic. Senate Majority Leader Lucas (D., Ill.), who will take a prominent role in the three-day session, is among those running in the fall.

He is opposed by Republican Everett M. Dirksen, former Congressman. The Truman-Jefferson jamboree in effect will touch off the reelection campaign of Lucas, a leading exponent of Mr. Truman's "fair deal."

serenaded him at Butte with a jazzed-up version of "Hail to the Chief." Shouts of "Yea, yea, Truman!" enlivened the Presidents official march.

Mr. Truman beamed. This copper-mining town gave him his first big hand in his slow-starting 1948 campaign. In 1948 he called the youthful serenaders "the best band I ever heard" and again warmly praised them today.

More than 10,000 laughed and cheered him as he "pleaded guilty" to what he said was one of the charges against him. He said he wanted to confess "I am in favor of good wages."

Mr. Truman termed collective bargaining the "main reliance" of the working man and called the Taft-Hartley Act a "substantial infringement" upon it.

"The Taft-Hartley Act hangs over the head of labor, threatening to destroy the gains of 15 years," he said. "There it will hang until we are able to replace it with a law that is fair to management and labor alike. I will not cease to fight for its repeal."

Then he lit into charges that his welfare policies would "make it possible for people to live without working." He said this comes "mostly from the lunatic fringe among the reactionaries."

"They say our Government program would make us a nation of deadbeats and loafers," he said. "That of course is absurd."

At Garrison, Mont., he renewed his plea for public power and river valley developments all over the country, but complained again: "There are some people who think that these things ought not to be done, because they like to have things stay just as they are."

Helena, Montana's capital city, was celebrating "Vigilante Day" as the President's train pulled in. Historic floats tracing Montana's frontier story were drawn up beside the train.

Governor Bonner presented the President a poke of gold dust and nuggets and a tie chain and cuff links made of Montana gold. Bonner introduced the President as "the greatest man in the history of the United States."

"I think he's giving me a little too much credit, but I appreciate it just the same" the President replied.

Riding with him through Montana's snow-capped mountains and purple ranges was Representative Mike Mansfield (D., Mont.), the first House member to come aboard.

Mansfield, the Administration's Assistant House Whip, still has no primary opposition but is being groomed to run for the Senate against Senator Gales Ecton (R.) in 1952. Truman called Mansfield "one of the ablest public officials" and said: "I depend on him a great deal."

At Missoula, Truman gave an example of what he meant by "acorn-thinking." He told of the benefits he said have stemmed from Hoover Dam on the Colorado, then quoted "one Congressman from the same political party as the gentleman after whom the dam is named."

Back in 1928, he told the crowd, this unnamed House member said Hoover Dam was a waste of funds that would damage industry and "lead us into communism." Then the President remarked:

"We will never be in danger of communism in this country, as long as we keep looking forward and doing things to increase the welfare and freedom of our people.

At Great Falls, Mont., the President accused Soviet Russia of telling "preposterous lies" about the United States. He said Russian Communists are "talking out of both sides of their mouths."

"Out of one side they say we are about to collapse economically," he said. "Out of the other they say we are strong and about to wage war."

"Those lies are dangerous," he told a cheering crowd of several thousand.

"I hope the country never gets into the hands of little men with acorn minds. Let us keep it in the hands of men who can see the trees and will work for the Nation, and a world, at peace."

In his labor speech, Mr. Truman said Congress has made "considerable progress" since 1948, despite the Taft-Hartley reverse. He stressed last session's increase in the minimum wage from 40 to 75 cents an hour. He said "all will benefit from the improvement it brings," even though their wages now are much higher.

He predicted Congress will complete action on the social security bill, lifting benefits and coverage, but "confessed" he was disappointed in the bill in its present form.

And he found "both good and bad to report about housing—mostly good." Home construction is now at an all-time high, mainly because of low-interest Government credit, he told the crowd. Passage of the low-rent public housing bill, "over opposition of the real estate lobby," represented "progress," he said.

But legislation authorizing more middle-income housing is still badly needed, "and I am sure that we will get it eventually," he said.

He praised Senator James E. Murray (D., Mont.) for helping get his 1946 "full employment" bill through Congress. As a result, he said, the Government is now committed to using our "full strength and resources" to keep the country prosperous. Senator Murray was unable to cross the State with Truman, due to the illness of his wife. Truman publicly voiced hope for her speedy recovery.

Mayors Hear Civil Defense Lag Criticized

New York, May 12 (U.P.).—Mayor Elmer E. Robinson, San Francisco, charged today that the Federal Government has made a "game of charades" out of civil defense against atomic attack.

He proposed that mayors "demand an end to fumbling, buck-passing, and the division of responsibility" which he said characterized the defense program.

Addressing the United States Conference of Mayors, Robinson said "it is self-evident that the Federal Government's hush-hush policy toward the men responsible for local civil defense has made comprehensive realistic planning for it at the local level impossible."

Robinson spoke after Civilian Mobilization Director Paul J. Larsen told the mayors that no city is immune "from wartime disaster at the hands of an enemy."

Larsen said no one could tell when or "where or with what weapons an enemy would strike." He urged cities and States to start planning civilian defense at once.

Robinson said the Federal Government had failed to tell local officials "precisely what should be done" in event of an atomic attack.

Robinson was preceded by William L. Laurence, New York Times science writer, who told the mayors that "an innocent tramp steamer" carrying an H-bomb could anchor five miles from a coastal city and not only destroy it by a blast, but make it uninhabitable for years with radioactivity.

Raymond M. Foley, administrator of the Housing and Home Finance Agency, told the mayors that initiative for both slum clearance and public housing rests with local communities rather than with the Federal Government.

private cars on official business. This is another item threatened with a cutback.

The T-T rider also would force cuts in money agencies could spend for equipment, supplies, and in contracts. Under no circumstances could the Government program for the 1951 fiscal year as proposed by the President be carried out. Most agencies simply wouldn't be able to build and buy under the amendment as they had planned.

What it would all mean, if the T-T rider is approved as written, is one reorganization after another throughout Government — employes would be fired, offices closed, and activities dropped.

Meantime, a White House official denounced the House cut as "terrible." He added that every effort will be made in the Senate to get the President's full budget approved. The House action, he said, was a "challenge" to the Federal agencies to do something about it.

Meantime, Representative Bleimiller (D., Wis.) told the House: "We ask for nothing but trouble when we apply indiscriminate across-the-board cuts. We are guilty, I think, in this House of 'meat-ax' economy."

He pointed out that the Post-office Department wouldn't be able to buy some of the modern equipment it needs if the cut stands. He also could have said that an estimated 45,000 postal employes would lose their jobs and postal service would sink to the lowest level in years if the cuts go through.

Representative Holifield (D., Calif.) also spoke up against the job and Government service-cutting riders. He said that St. Elizabeths Hospital here, the largest mental institution in the world, would be in a bad way if it's unable to replace doctors and nurses who leave the service. "It is just another indication of passing a broad and sweeping amendment without knowing its effect," Holifield said.

Three other Democrats told reporters that the Government won't be able to fire undesirables or inefficient employes if the Republican economy move stands up.

Chairman Cannon (D., Mo.) of the Appropriations Committee said the vacancy filling ban "will have the effect of preventing efficient manning of some of the Government bureaus because it won't let them fill vacancies."

Cannon was joined by Representatives Rabraut (D., Mich.) and Rooney (D., N. Y.), also members of the Appropriations Committee.

On the other hand, two key Senators voiced hope that the Senate will reverse its usual role and retain much of the big cut approved by the House in a 29-billion-dollar appropriation bill.

Normally, the Senate adds substantially to House-approved money bills.

Chairman McKellar (D., Tenn.) of the Senate Appropriations Committee said he hopes the Senate will "go along with many of the House cuts" in the one-package money bill.

Senator Bridges (R., N. H.), the ranking Republican member of the committee, went further. "I hope we can hold the line and substantially increase the cuts," he said.

Bridges called the House action "exceptionally good."

Incidentally, one agency in a particular hot spot is the Office of the Housing Expeditor. It has enough money to carry through until May 26. The President has asked Congress to approve $800,000 for the rent control agency to continue the remainder of this fiscal year.

But it's unlikely whether even the House will have acted on the deficiency bill by OHE's May 26 deadline, let alone the entire Congress. What to do? It's bewildered officials and employes would like to know.

The delay in acting on the deficiency bill will force many employes to go payless—unless Congress passes a resolution to allow agencies to continue spending money in the meantime.

A check was being made yesterday for both the White House and congressional leaders on the agencies that are in a financial jam. An incomplete report revealed that the only Federal agency whose employes may miss a payday this month is Maritime training. A few District of Columbia offices also are out of cash.

But if the deficiency bill is delayed beyond the end of this month—as now appears likely—scores of agencies may miss their payrolls. One helpful angle—most employes have delayed paydays as they are paid up to two weeks after they have earned the money. Many agencies can be technically "broke" but still meet one payday.

Pair Released By China Reds Returning to U. S.

A sailor and marine, held by Chinese Communists from October 19, 1948, until their release Tuesday, will be flown directly home by the Navy, it was announced yesterday at the Pentagon.

They are W. C. Smith, chief construction electrician's mate, of Long Beach, Calif., and M/Sergt. Elmer C. Bender of Chicago. They were seized when their plane came down during a routine training flight.

The two are expected to arrive at Hongkong Monday aboard a British coastal steamer. A Navy plane and physician will be awaiting them. They will be examined, then flown to Pearl Harbor for outfitting with clothing, and next flown directly to their homes. Secretary of the Navy Matthews, Thursday, personally informed their wives of the safe release.

ville claim they were stoned by nonstrikers, and another group of strikers charged they were almost run down by a auto driven by a Southern railroad detective.

New York Central said that a bullet was reported fired into the cab of a freight locomotive as it pulled out of Elkhardt, Ind. An NYC freight was reported derailed in Cleveland, and a company official declared it was a "deliberate act of sabotage." A firemen's union officer termed the derailment report as a "hoax."

Impact of the strike, and the tie-up in vital rail transportation, spread around the country. Some 16,000 coal miners have been idled in western Pennsylvania. Mines were reported closing down in southern Illinois, Indiana, and West Virginia. Approximately 5000 General Motors employes have been furloughed. Willys-Overland went on a four-day week. Western Michigan feared heavy losses in poultry. Producers said trucks could not handle the area's full output of 800,000 chicks weekly.

Principal issue in the dispute is the brotherhoods' demand that two firemen—instead of one, as now—be assigned to multiple diesel locomotives. This demand, originally covering all diesels, is now limited to high-speed, through passenger trains, with the union offering to arbitrate the demand.

The railroads insist that the additional fireman is not needed—for safety, as claimed by the union—and points to two decisions of emergency boards backing up the management viewpoint.

Although the dispute involves all the Nation's railroads, the brotherhood struck only four "strategic" roads in order to avoid Government seizure or other drastic action.

Union Station Furloughs 100 Maintenance Men

Approximately 100 maintenance men have been furloughed by Washington Terminal Co., which operates Union Station, because of the locomotive firemen's strike against Southern Railway and the western lines of the Pennsylvania Railroad.

Total employment at the station, however, has increased by 100, since the terminal has had to hire 200 extra dispatchers to cope with the additional mail being sent west via the Baltimore & Ohio, instead of from New York via the New York Central and PRR.

Christianity Urged As Bar to Cynicism

Chicago, May 12 (AP).—The frontiers of this generation lie in the fields of science, industry and politics, a Baptist educator said today.

But Christianity must be made an integral part of the lives of the "pioneers of the future" who follow these fields if our age is not to surrender to "harsh cynicism," he added.

John Wesley Raley, president of Oklahoma Baptist University, Shawnee, Okla., told the Southern Baptist Convention the questions of major concern today are whether the interests of the two can be brought into harmony to the good of both.

"Some see no basis for optimism in reconciliation of these points of view," he said. "The prophets of doom declare the crisis has become permanent and general, and that competition between organized groups of men is keenest in the field of destructive weapons.

"Men of optimistic realism know the defeatist has seen only the background, the dark colors upon which God is even now sketching his portrait across the canvas of moving history."

Raley said that "there are new frontiers . . . beyond which lie the regions of destiny for this generation."

These, he said, include "the mysterious realm of science"; the field of economics and industry, in which "there is literally a world to win," and the area of politics, where "our frontiers seem never to recede."

"In all of these," he declared "as in every other area of human striving, we must accent the Christian principle as the only possible agent of integration. The scientist who labors only at the command of the state or at the behest of mammon to produce weapons of destruction, with no thought of the moral consequences of his discoveries, has defiled the loftiest traditions of research.

WAS LINCOLN A UNITARIAN?

For centuries Unitarians have rejected creeds and dogmas and have stressed the spirit of the Nazarene in their personal and social living.

Church Federation To Mark Birthday

The thirtieth anniversary of Protestant cooperation in Washington will be marked at the annual meeting of the Washington Federation of Churches at 8 p. m. Tuesday at the Mayflower Hotel.

The Rev. Dr. John Sutherland Bonnell, minister of Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church in New York City and radio minister of the "Church of the Air," will speak on "Protestantism in a Democracy."

Nomination and election of new officers will also be a part of the meeting. The Right Rev. Angus Dun, Episcopal Bishop of Washington, who has served as federation president for the past two years, will preside.

New officers and board members will be installed by the Rev. Andrew R. Bird, pastor of the Church of the Pilgrims and a former president of the federation.

Coleman Jennings, a member of the board, will present an anniversary gift to the federation on behalf of its friends, and the annual report will be given by the Rev. Dr. Frederick E. Reissig, executive secretary.

The federation was organized on March 15, 1920, at Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church. Since then its membership has grown from 60 to 209 churches and its staff from 2 to 16.

Since 1927, offices have been in a five-story building at 1751 N st. nw.

On Sunday

New Chapel Ground to Be Broken

Ground for the new Episcopal Chapel of the Atonement, 52d and East Capitol sts., will be broken at 4 p. m. Sunday.

The Gothic chapel will be erected at a cost of $100,000 and will take about 10 months to complete.

When completed the chapel will seat 250 persons and will have a full-length basement for parish activities. Later a vicarage and a parish hall will be erected.

The Rev. William MacD. Sharp, rector of St. John's Church, Georgetown and chairman of the diocesan department of missions, and the Rev. Quinland Reeves Gordon, vicar of Atonement Chapel, will conduct the ground-breaking service.

The present Chapel of the Atonement is at 56th and Grant sts. ne., about a mile and a half from the new site. Because the congregation has outgrown the present facilities, the Diocese of Washington is advancing funds for the new building.

Union to Hear Two Former D. C. Rectors

Two former Washington rectors will speak at a conference sponsored by the Washington branch of the American Church Union on Tuesday at the Church of St. Stephen and the Incarnation, 16th and Newton sts. nw.

The Rev. Calvert E. Buck, formerly rector of Christ Church, Washington parish, will speak at 5:15 p. m. and 8 p. m. on "History Repeats Itself" and "The Holy Spirit in the Church." He is now rector of St. John's Church, Glyndon, Md.

At 7:15 p. m. the Rev. A. J. duBois, former rector of the Church of the Ascension and St. Agnes, will speak on the work of the American Church Union of the Episcopal Church. He left the Washington church in April to become national executive director of the A. C. U.

The conference will open with hymn singing at 5 p. m. Dinner will be served at 6 p. m.

Special Service At St. Mark's

Episcopal women from all of the parishes, missions and congregations of the diocese of Washington will attend a service at 8 p. m. Sunday at St. Mark's Church, 3d and A sts. se.

At the service they will present their "United Thank Offering," funds to be used to assist in paying women missionaries and church workers of the Episcopal Church.

The Rev. Robert J. Plumb, rector of St. Mark's, will conduct the service, and Mrs. David W. Clark, who has worked for many years among American Indians, will speak.

School Safety Patrols To Attend Services

Safety patrol boys in Washington for their annual visit will attend services at First Baptist Church and at the Washington Cathedral Sunday.

The First Baptist service will be at 7 a. m. at the church, 16th and O sts. nw., with the Rev. R. Edward Dowdy, associate minister, preaching. More than 200 of the boys are expected to attend a special service at 9 a. m. at the cathedral, and afterward will go on a tour of the building.

Dr. Glenn Plans Review

The Rev. Dr. C. Leslie Glenn, rector, will review H. A. Overstreet's "The Mature Mind" at 7:30 p. m. Sunday at St. John's Episcopal Church, Lafayette sq. nw.

Manganese Find Reported

Lebanon, Va., May 12, (AP).—Prospectors are reported to have found ore samples containing a high percentage of manganese in the southwest section of Russell County.

County Clerk Ellis F. Hargis said the search for ore has been carried on by men operating as the Industrial Minerals Co., Hargis reported they have signed contracts for prospecting with owners of about 2300 acres of land.

Elwood Bausell, editor of the weekly Lebanon News, quoted the prospectors that some of the ore samples analyzed as high as 54 percent manganese.

Russia has long been the world's leading producer of manganese, used to harden steel. United States production is small and a large part of the U. S. supply has been imported, much of it from Brazil.

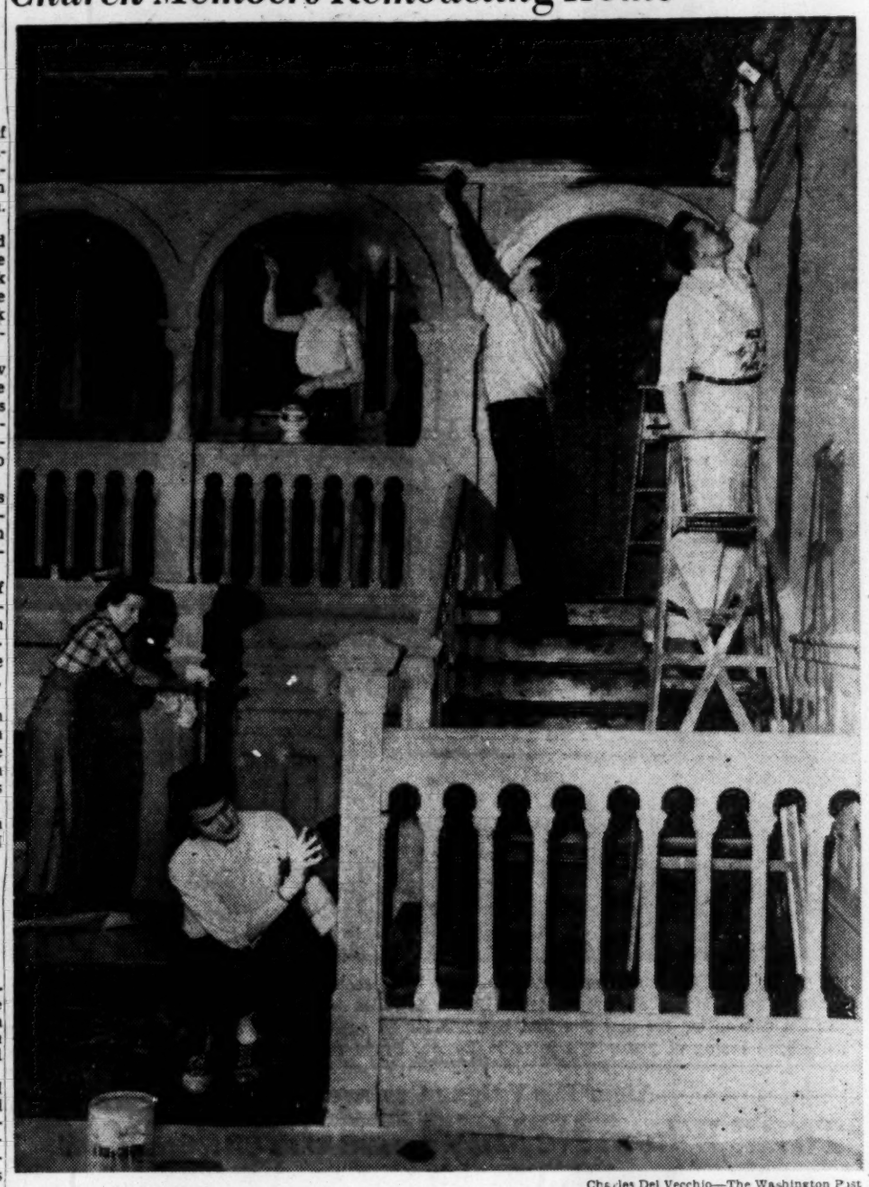
Church Members Remodeling Home



Charles Del Vecchio—The Washington Post

PAINT-UP TIME—Members of the Church of the Saviour, now at 1707 19th st. nw., are refurbishing the building at 2025 Massachusetts ave. nw., which was purchased by the church at a cost of $60,000 in March. Each week about 25 members of the congregation, led by the Rev. Newton Gordon Crosby, pastor, work several nights cleaning the building, removing old paint and paper and repainting the rooms. Virginia Site Offered Free for Freedom Fair

A tract of nearly 200 acres about a quarter of a mile south of the Pentagon was offered to the Sesquicentennial Commission yesterday as a site for the Freedom Fair.

The offer, made by Charles H. Tompkins and Morris Cafritz, Washington real estate men, came shortly after it was learned the commission may legally spend funds to survey private industry for possible underwriting of the fair.

Although the executive committee of the commission has recommended dropping the fair, the full commission has not acted on the recommendation and officials said yesterday the new development may save the fair.

Rent-Free for Three Years

Tompkins and Cafritz, coowners of the land, said it is now available and can be used rent-free for three years.

Tompkins described the tract as bounded by the Army-Navy drive on the north, Arlington Ridge rd. and S. Lynn st. on the west, Eads st., next to Jefferson Davis hwy. (Route 1) on the east and 18th st. S. on the south. From the Pentagon it lies directly across the cloverleaf leading out of the south parking area.

He said he believes no other available site would be so close to railroad, airline, bus and automobile traffic facilities.

Funds Available

The commission has received informal advice from the General Accounting Office that funds can be used to sound out industry on financing the fair, it was learned yesterday.

Attorney General J. Howard McGrath in a recent decision ruled out operation of the Freedom Fair by a nonprofit corporation, but suggested asking the GAO's opinion on the survey. The GAO's informal opinion would allow the use of up to $150,000 for the survey.

The full Sesquicentennial Commission is expected to meet shortly for a decision. The meeting may be held when President Truman, the commission chairman, returns from his trip to the west.

Briton Advises Architects To Plan Big

Sir Patrick Abercrombie, famed British architect and planner, last night was awarded the American Institute of Architects' gold medal at the group's eighty-second annual convention dinner in the Mayflower Hotel.

In accepting the medal, Sir Patrick advised the architects to "make big plans," even if they are not always realized.

Recalling the city planning movement of 1900 in America, Sir Patrick said "those ideas have not all been carried out, but the germs of great ideas are to be seen in the cities" that had such plans.

"Make big plans, and have small parts that can be caried out at once," he advised. "Make them flexible, so they can be brought up to date, but make big plans."

Twenty - seven distinguished architects, mostly gray - haired, were made fellows of the institute. Among those chosen by the committee of fellows headed by John W. Root of Chicago, was Clinton H. Cowgill of Blacksburg, Va., head of the department of architecture at Virginia Polytechnic Institute. The honor was in recognition of his "distinguished service in architectural education."

About 800 persons attended the the dinner.

Officers elected yesterday included Ralph Walker, New York City, president; Glenn Stanton, Portland, Oreg., first vice president; Kenneth E. Wischmeyer, St. Louis, second vice president; Clair W. Ditchy, Detroit, secretary, and Charles F. Cellarius, Cincinnati, treasurer.

The convention called on the President and Congress to take action to remove temporary buildings here as a feature of the District's Sesquicentennial. The resolution said continued existence of the temporary buildings mars the city plan.

In other action, the convention favored legislation now pending in Congress to reorganize the National Capital Park and Planning Commission and broaden its power. Another resolution favored passage of legislation insuring preservation of the Old Stone House at 3051 M st. nw. "in the public interest."

The four-day convention will adjourn at 1 p. m. today, following a 9:30 a. m. symposium at which Lewis Mumford is to speak on "Regional Planning and the Small Town," and an 11 a. m. business session.

Planners' Report to Advocate Spreading Out of Agencies

The National Capital Park and Planning Commission's comprehensive plan for Greater Washington, in the making for several years, will concentrate on decentralization of Governmental units.

This was disclosed by John Nolen, jr., commission planning director, in a talk before the opening session of the National Citizens Conference on Planning for City, State and Nation at the Statler Hotel.

Nolen said a monograph summarizing the plan will be made available July 1—the latest in a long succession of announced publication dates—when the commission opens an exhibit in the Corcoran Gallery as part of the Sesquicentennial celebration.

Suburban Locations Proposed

Nolen said the report will recommend:

1. No further concentration of Federal workers in the central area west of the Capitol.

2. Selective determination of those agencies requiring central location.

3. And the location of "all others needing to be in the Washington area . . . at varying distances out from the center, preferably beyond the edge of the present or prospective urban fringe."

The commission's views were echoed by Ralph Walker, president of the American Institute of Architects, who addressed a conference luncheon meeting.

Walker, in predicting the city's status 50 years hence, called for "rapid elimination" of war scars such as temporary barracks, followed by dispersal of remaining Federal services.

Would Remove Navy Building

He urged removal of "the Navy Building, one of the most permanent of the temporary, the barracks lining the Mall, and many other structures, all of which should never have been built in the first place."

The structures crowded "the very center of the center" of wartime activities and "certainly ruined the Capital."

Walker emphasized the need for placing Federal agencies near the areas where people live and redeveloping l'Enfant's original concept of Federal departments being scattered rather than concentrated.

Also on the program yesterday were Major Gen. U. S. Grant 3d, former chairman of the Planning Commission; Fred W. Tuemmler, Maryland National Capital Park and Planning Commission; John W. Brookfield, Northern Virginia Planning Commission, and Harry W. Thompson, National Capital Parks.

The conference will continue daily at the Statler through Wednesday evening.

A mother-daughter tea will be held by the Girls' Athletic Association of Montgomery Hills Junior High School from 3 p. m. to 5 p. m. today at Grace Episcopal Church parish hall, Silver Spring, Md.

Jewish Center Presents Molly Picon on Sunday

Molly Picon will present songs and monologues in Yiddish and English at 8:30 p. m. Sunday at the Jewish Community Center.

The event, climaxing this season's cultural activities at the Center, will mark Miss Picon's first appearance in Washington in several years.

Trade Board's Tourist Drive Collects $32,500

An impressive $32,500 was reported raised in the Greater National Capital Committee subscription campaign or the Washington Board of Trade at the first report luncheon yesterday in the Raleigh Hotel.

The goal is $110,000, which will be used for activities of the city's convention and tourist bureau in the year beginning July 1.

Yanks Beat Out A's on Coleman's 3-Run Homer, 3-2

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

BOSTON, MAY 12.—Ted Williams has Boston Town in an uproar again. He has split the populace down the middle into two camps: (1) those who like him and (2) those who don't. New recruits are swarming to the second group.

Williams, the man with the bat, was at peace with Fenway Park fans for a couple of years, and then yesterday old wounds popped open during the double-header with the Tigers. The boos were heard again in the first game when Williams dropped a fly ball with two on base. At the end of the inning, Ted responded on the way to the dugout by gesturing with two extended fingers of each hand held to his ears, and the implication was plain enough. The booing fans were jackasses.

POVICH

Yet so intense is the adulation for Williams in these parts, he might have gotten away with it save for his misfortune in the second game. That was when he let a single go through his legs with the bases full and three Detroit runs scored. Now the boos rained down on his sensitive ears and he reacted like a real angry small boy.

ON HIS WAY to the dugout, Teddy resorted to vulgar gestures, and to make certain that none missed his opinion of them, he deliberately pivoted toward the stands in left field, right field and behind the plate with upstuck fingers. They didn't miss the meaning, and now the catcalls drowned out wnat had been the feeble applause.

Teddy's been having his troubles with the Fenway fans ever since he broke in here from Minneapolis, touted as the hottest article to come up to the Red Sox, and proving it with the hottest bat any American Leaguer since Ty Cobb has swung. But it was presumed, until yesterday, that he was ridding himself of his small-boy antics.

In those early days, Williams was not above putting his hands on his hips and jawing back at the customers with an "I-make-more-money-in-a-year—" attitude than "you bums make in a lifetime." And on one occasion it appeared he was deliberately fouling off balls into the left field seats to emphasize how he felt toward his hecklers.

YET, CURIOUSLY enough, Boston fans were forgiving, in their adulation over his hitting, and a loud if noisy minority held out against Teddy with any bitterness. After the war, it was assumed, that he would be a changed guy, and indeed, he didn't flare up notably until the other day.

He was still stark sore at the Fenway customers when he was interviewed 25 minutes after the game, and despite the 15-minute cooling off period that has been decreed here before reporters can enter the dressing room.

"Tell those d—— b——— out there there I still think they are ???!!&&& and you can quote me," Teddy told the first reporter to reach him.

Yet today, he was positively the charm kid when the boos were renewed, full of smiles, and beaming happily when the applause began to outweigh the jeering.

BEFORE THE game started, it seems, Teddy had made what was called a public apology. The inference in the statement by the Red Sox on club stationary, was that he had been called on the carpet by Owner Tom Yawkey. Anyway, the statement read:

"After a talk with Mr. Yawkey, Ted Williams has requested that this announcement be made to the fans: Ted is sorry for his impulsive actions on the field yesterday and wishes to apologize to any and all whom he may have offended."

But it sounded more like an apology by the club for Williams, when they put it that way, without direct quotes. The club was saying Williams was sorry. He could have been more direct, had he been so moved.

Hoyas Whip Seton Hall, 7-3

South Orange, N. J., May 12 (AP).—Georgetown University's baseball team snapped Seton Hall's three-game winning streak with a 7-3 victory over the Pirates today.

The visitors limited Seton Hall to five hits in posting their thirteenth win in 17 games.

Tom Flynn of Georgetown walked four but he consistently had Seton Hall hitting into the ground or popping up. He fanned two.

Georgetown collected nine hits off Ed Groben, three of them in the eighth when it scored four runs to clinch the victory.

Georgetown went ahead early, scoring once in the first and picking up two more in the second when Dick Falvey blasted a homer.

Seton Hall came back with two in the fourth, but Georgetown wrapped up the decision with its four-run burst in the eighth.

A two-base error by Shortstop Doc Ayers opened the way for Georgetown in the eighth with a walk and three singles doing the rest.

Score by innings:

Georgetown	120 000 040—7
Seton Hall	000 200 001—3

Redskins Sign Oklahoma's Thomas, No. 1 Draft Choice

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

THE WASHINGTON Redskins made a package deal yesterday, acquiring a halfback and a backwoods humorist at no extra cost.

The 2-for-1 acquisition is George (Spike) Thomas, Oklahoma University running star who was the Redskins' No. 1 college draft choice.

"Spike" Thomas

Unlike several other collegiates who have trooped into the team's offices to sign, the 22-year-old Thomas was completely relaxed and ready with a quip for practically every question directed at him.

How could he explain Oklahoma's easy 42-0 victory over L.S.U. in the Sugar Bowl game?

"Won't nothin' to that," he responded. "L.S.U. wasn't out there to win, they were just playin' to irritate us. Never saw a bunch of boys who could scratch and pinch and elbow like those L.S.U. boys. They couldn't tackle worth a hoot, but, boy, they sure could scratch and pinch."

How does a country boy—"I'm from Fairland, Oklahoma, myself"—feel about being on the same team with Sammy Baugh?

"I reckon it's a thrill," he said, completely unawed.

How did he happen to choose Oklahoma to do his college football?

"I didn't, Coach Jim Tatum choosed it for me." (Editor's note: Tatum, present Maryland coach, coached at Oklahoma in 1946.)

"Henry Frnka, who used to coach at Tulsa, enrolled me at Tulane in the summer of 1946. One day I came home to get some clothes and there was Coach Tatum on my porch.

"He gave me a lot of fast, big talk—and he's a good 'un with that—and the first thing I knew I was in his car that night driving 230 miles to Oklahoma University. Never did get back to Tulane.

"They had a lot of football players knocking heads out there when Tatum suited me up one day and told me he was gonna scrimmage me. You know, he'd brought up a lot of troops from that Jacksonville Navy team he coached.

"Well, I just stood around and all of a sudden he called for me to go in at right halfback. I never had played that Split-T stuff. First thing I knew the quarterback shoveled a little pass at me. The ball hit the ground, I caught it on the second hop and flew 75 yards.

"Boy, you shoulda seen Tatum's eyes pop open then. He got real big-eyed. And when I nudged it over the goal line on the next try, well, I was sort of his boy from then on out."

A dead ringer for Spike Jones, of City Slicker fame, the 6 feet 1 inch 192-pounder started out as an end. But he likes the backfield.

"Playing backfield is easy. "Ain't nothin' to carrying that football. It's not heavy."

Bosox End Nat Streak At Five, 3-1

out, and that's all the Washington hits there were.

They were no more, so thoroughly did McDermott and his tantalizing left-handed offerings have them tamed.

The Nats abandoned Scarborough offensively, after getting him one run in the second inning on Evans' two-base blast against the left field wall after Ortiz walked. Quite magnificently he attempted to keep them in the ball game despite the nine hits he allowed.

Dropo was in Scarborough hair all afternoon. His was the middle single of consecutive hits through the infield by Doerr, Dropo and Ken Keltner that got the Sox a run in their own second. Scarborough got out of a bigger mess by fanning Tebbett with one out and runners on second and third.

It was Scarborough's high effort to put everything on the ball that helped put him in trouble in the seventh after Dropo led off with a single through short. With one out, the Nats' pitcher wild-pitched Dropo to second, put him in scoreing position for Tebbetts' vengeful two-bagger that followed.

Doerr Slams Triple

The Red Sox came up with an insurance run after two were out in the eighth. Vern Stephens got his only hit, a double off the barrier in left, and Bobby Doerr permitted him to jog home with a triple to deepest center field.

McDermott steadied smartly after getting in trouble in the fifth and seventh. In the fifth, the Nats made a bid for a run when Evans singled off the fence and Combs walked with none out. But Scarborough's attempt to bunt resulted only in a force play at third, and Yost hit into a force play at second. Dente took a third strike.

With the score still tied, the Nats attempted the initiative again in the seventh when Evans led off with another single to left. The bunt was their undoing again. Combs' effort was a foul pop to Keltner. Scarborough also tried to bunt and hit into a force play at second. McDermott filled the bases with passes to Yost and Dente, putting the issue up to ex-Red Socker Tom O'Brien who put up a soft fly to Dropo for the third out.

The Nats never did get anybody else on base, which is no way to win ball games.

IN SHORT—The Nats were squawking all day at the ball-and strike calls of rookie Umpire Hank Soar, former star back of the N. Y. football Giants . . . Bucky Harris had to roll with a pre-game punch, learning that Irv Noren was undergoing an emergency appendix operation in Washington that would keep him out of the lineup for at least three weeks . . . there were 5822 paid admissions today, with Boston fans de-enthused after the double loss to the Tigers yesterday . . . Ted Williams was both booed and applauded by Fenway Park fans on his appearances at the plate but appeared in gay mood after his outbursts at the customers the day before . . . Scarborough got a hand on his every appearance at the plate from Boston fans, who refused to believe he was a bogey man, with horns . . . NO TRAP FOR DROPO—Sam Dente (No. 40), Nats' second baseman, spills atop Walt Dropo of the Boston Red Sox but was not able to tag the new Sox first baseman for an out in the second inning of yesterday's game in Boston. Dropo ran from first on Ken Keltner's single to center field and was passing second when he changed his mind and dove back to the bag. He was nearly trapped by Sam Mele's throw to Dente

After His Vulgar Gestures to Fans

'To All Whom He May Have Offended,' Sox Issue Apology in Behalf of Ted Williams

Boston, May 12 (U.P.)—Slugger Ted Williams of the Boston Red Sox formally apologized today for making allegedly obscene gestures of derision at booing fans during yesterday's doubleheader at Fenway Park.

The Red Sox public relations office issued this statement:

"After a talk with Mr. Yawkey (Owner Tom Yawkey of the Red Sox), Ted Williams has requested that this announcement be made to the fans.

"Ted is sorry for his impulsive actions on the field yesterday and wishes to apologize to any and all whom he may have offended."

The booing resulted from two costly errors by Williams in left field as the Detroit Tigers dumped the Sox from first to fourth place in the American League with 13-4, 5-3 beatings.

Williams, regularly booed by some fans at home games, dropped an apparently easy fly ball in the sixth inning of the opener, permitting a run to score.

Enroute to the dugout after the inning, Williams was booed and he turned toward the stands and made an apparently vulgar gesture with his fingers.

In the eighth inning of the second game, Williams fumbled a tricky hit to left and three runs came in. Again there were boos. Coming from the field, Williams stopped before the dugout and gestured again—a similar finger motion that seemed unmistakably obscene.

While waiting to bat in end of the eighth, Williams turned and apparently spat in the direction of the still booing fans.

Columnist Harold Kaese of the Boston Globe recounted how one father had to evasively reply to his young son who asked what Williams' gestures meant.

Sternest rebuke came from the Boston American which in a sports-page editorial said Williams "removed himself from the ranks of decent sportsmen."

Suggesting that he be suspended, the editorial said:

"This man is not the great baseball player he thinks he is. Very good, but not great. He is certainly not the big man so many believed him to be. Yesterday he was a little man and, in his ungovernable rage, a dirty little man."

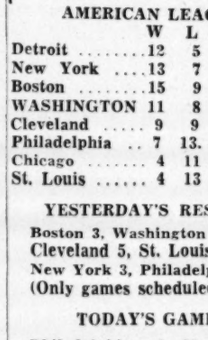
Boston's Bonus Beauty

Nats Get Pitcher Frank Quinn From Red Sox on Waivers

Boston, May 12.—The Nats took on more of a tinge as the Red Sox junior varsity today when they claimed Pitcher Frank Quinn, former glamor boy of the Yale campus, at the $10,000 waiver price.

With six ex-members of the Red Sox already on their roster, the Nats unabashedly added Quinn, a bonus player whom the Red Sox reportedly paid $50,000 for signing after his graduation in 1948.



FRANK QUINN

The Boston club was giving up on the handsome righthander who saw little service with them, after almost rivalling the legendary feat of Frank and Dick Merriwell, also pitching characters at Yale.

Quinn, handsome, six-foot-two, 185 pound righthander saw no action with the Red Sox this year, and pitched only 22 innings last year, wholly in relief roles. The Red Sox seasoned him at Birmingham in 1948, where he won nine, lost six.

His forte is a fast ball and his apparent need is for more seasoning, but because he bears the bonus label, the Nats are unable to send him out on option without obtaining waivers.

Manager Bucky Harris, however, is smitten by the fact that Quinn is only 22. "With us, he'll get a chance to work more and show what he can do with that fast ball."

Despite his Yale background, Quinn is the son of a Georgetown U. athlete. His father was a teammate of Jack Hagerty on the good G. U. football teams in the mid-twenties.

After his feats for Yale, and after pitching them into the national collegiate finals, Quinn was eagerly sought by both the Yankees and Red Sox, with Tom Yawkey trumping the Yanks' biggest bid.

The roster of former Red Sox now with the Nats reads: Sam Dente, Sam Mele, Tom O'Brien, Al Kozar and Merrill Combs.

And Bucky Harris is a managerial alumnus. POVICH.

Young Outpoints Fusari in Garden

New York, May 12 (AP).—Paddy Young, middleweight contender from New York, staged a rally in the final round tonight to gain a split decision over Charlie Fusari of Irvington, N. J., in a bloody and stirring 10-round battle in Madsion Square Garden. Young weighed 154½, Fusari 151½.

Young's edge was as small as you could make it—one point.

Referee Ruby Goldstein voted for Fusari, 6 to 3, with one even. Judge Joe Agnello scored for Young, 6-4, and Judge Bill Healy cast the deciding ballot for Young by one point.

Cubs Outlast Pirates, 6-3

Chicago, May 12 (AP).—The Chicago Cubs routed Hal Gregg with a five-run explosion in the third inning here today and hung on grimly thereafter for a 6-3 triumph over the Pittsburgh Pirates in the opener of a four-game series.

The Cubs concentrated four hits, all extra-base blows, in the big inning.

Wayne Terwilliger doubled and scored on a similar wallop by Hank Edwards. Preston Ward followed with his third homer of the season. Hank Sauer then walked and Andy Pafko hammered his No. 4 homer into the bleachers.

Chapman Clouts One To Drive in Macks' Runs

New York, May 12 (AP).—Jerry Coleman socked a three-run home run in the fifth inning tonight to lead the New York Yankees to a 3-2 triumph over the Philadelphia Athletics.

Sam Chapman accounted for both Philadelphia runs with a home run in the sixth inning off Tommy Byrne who went the distance for the Yanks.

Billy Johnson singled with one out in the fifth to start the Yanks underway. Hank Bauer followed with a fly to Paul Lehner but the A.'s outfielder dropped the ball. Coleman then homered into the left field stands to break a scoreless tie and win the game.

The A's had Byrne on the ropes in the next inning. Ferris Fain walked and Chapman homered to put the A's back into the game. Byrne then walked Elmer Valo and Kermit Wahl followed with a single. Byrne then bore down and fanned Pete Suder, got Joe Tipton to pop out and Pitcher Lou Brissie to hit into a force out to end the threat.

Briar Patch, Loudoun Shows Today

By Harry De Mawby, Jr.

Hilton Village, Va., May 12.—The two-day Briar Patch Horse Show which gets under way here tomorrow tops the crowded horse show slate for this three-show weekend with over 500 entries scheduled for the 50-class program.

The first session, beginning at 9 a. m. (EST), has drawn a quality field of hunters and jumpers from some of the best show stables in Maryland, Virginia and the Carolinas.

The Linky Smith Stables of Cockeysville, Md., are on hand with six performers in both hunter and jumper divisions, including entries of George Di Paula and Roxy Wagner.

The well-known stables of Martin Vogel, jr., and Mrs. Gregory McIntosh, Warrenton, Va., are represented with eight horses; others showing sizable strings are Mrs. Raymond Barbin, Farmington, Va.; Manley Carter, Orange, Va.; Mrs. T. Kenneth Ellis, Hot Springs, Va.; Spunky Fisher, Salisbury, N. C.; Jack Payne, Keswick, Va., and the W. Haggin Perrys, Cobham, Va.

Jack Spratt, Westbury, Long Island; North Fletcher, Warrenton, Va.; L. T. Parker, Hampton, Va., and K. C. Johnson, Virginia Beach, Va., are here for the judging duties.

150 Entries Received For Loudoun Show

Leesburg, Va., May 12.—More than 150 entries have been received for the annual Loudoun Hunt Horse Show tomorrow at Raspberry Plain, estate of S. Ross Lipscomb, 2 miles north of Leesburg.

Post entries will be accepted.

The Masters' Challenge Bowl, featured number on the program, has eight horses listed, some of these consistent winners on the horse show circuit. Outstanding in the group is Fitzrada, aged chestnut gelding belonging to Col. and Mrs. H. H. Pohl.

Fitzrada has two legs on the Bowl. Another win will give his permanent possession of the trophy.

Other entries in this class include Adele Hawthorne's Black Sparkle, Anna F. Hedrick's Mac Arthur, Mrs. Albert S. White's Spanish Blaze.

Ferd Rated Only Threat To Big Three

By John Chandler

New York, May 12 (AP).—It looks as if Belmont Park has cooked up a ding-dong horse race tomorrow in the ancient Withers Mile.

In the field for the seventy-fifth running of the $25,000-added event for 3-year-olds are three of the big Kentucky Derby horses, including the winner—King Ranch's Middleground.

To keep him company, and make the Texas Twister earn anything he gets, will be Hill Prince, the pride of Virginia, and California's Derby disappointment, Your Host. Hill Prince, owned by Chris Chenery, copped second money in the Derby last Saturday, and Your Host ran ninth for Bill Goetz.

Ferd Has A Chance

Ten were entered for the Withers, but barring an upset of major proportions, the only other one rated much chance of edging into the winner's circle is Mrs. Andy Schuttinger's Ferd.

The field is rounded out by William Helis' Selector, Brandywine Stable's Greek Song, George D. Widener's Lights Up, Mrs. Walter M. Jeffords' Suleiman, C. Howard Scheid's Maryland Day, and Mrs. Susan P. Markus' Erosion. All will carry 126 pounds.

Since the Derby was over the mile and one-quarter route, the Withers could wind up with a red hot scramble at the end of the one-mile gallop.

Your Host, favored to win the Derby, set a blistering pace for the first mile before folding last Saturday, and they can't count the West Coast flyer out this time. In fact, the oddsmakers are quoting him the favorite again at 8 to 5, with Middleground and Hill Prince each 2 to 1.

Middleground and Hill Prince were just closing on Your Host at the end of the mile at Churchill Downs.

Those three, along with Ferd, Selector, Greek Song, Suleiman and Maryland Day are nominated for the mile and three-sixteenths Preakness.

Eddie Arcaro had been given permission to ride Your Host tomorrow, but when Trainer Casey Hayes belatedly decided to start Hill Prince it was called off. Your Host now is without a rider. Bill Boland will be up on Middleground again.

Hoyas After Tourney Berth; Boast .323 Batting Average

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

Georgetown University is shooting for a berth in next month's N.C.A.A. baseball tournament with an incredible .323 team batting average, and a sure-fire big league pitching prospect in Frank Mattingly.

Seven of the eight Hoya regulars are swatting over the .300 mark, and the only guy not in that exclusive circle is John Moskal, catcher and captain. He's having a hard time making the boys toe the line with his .154 average.

The Hoyas have won 13 out of 17 so far with batting averages that look like this:

Rightfielder Frank Alagia, .449; Shortstop Steve Korfonta, .385; Leftfielder George Hughes, 364; First Baseman Tom Hardiman, .333; Second Baseman Moe Zanger, .326; Third Baseman Dick Falvey, .316, and Centerfielder Lou Surman,. 303.

Mattingly, gangling 6-foot, 4-inch sophomore righthander, with a buzzing fast ball, has won all four of his starts, and allowed only three earned runs in the process. He has a lot to learn and shaky control to master, but he's only 20, and has time on his side.

Three of the four Hoya losses were by one run, 4-3, to Penn State and Penn, and 3-2 to Maryland. The other loss was to Rutgers, 6-3. Coach Joe Judge's boys came back to beat Penn and Penn State in return games.

And they've licked some good teams in Syracuse, Princeton and Seton Hall.

Judge, a big leaguer with the Nats, Dodgers and Red Sox for 20 years, has his boys behaving like big leaguers. They swing like big timers and throw and hustle like them, and they're hard-riding bench jockeys.

Today's $20,000 Dixie Draws Smart Field

Chicle 2d Carries High Weight of 120

Pimlico, Md., May 12.—The Dixie Handicap, an older race than the Preakness, features tomorrow's program of the Maryland Jockey Club. A smart field of 10 was named overnight for the $20,000 added test over the mile and three-sixteenths course.

Just where favoritism will fall in the well-matched field remains to be seen. However, the high-weight of the group is Palatine Stable's Chicle II. The South American hope has been assigned 120 pounds.

Arrayed against the Palatine star will be Mrs. E. D. Weir's Royal Governor, 118; C. E. Tuttle's Double Brandy, 110; King Ranch's Curandero, 109; C. Mahlon Kline's Slam Bang, 109, and Bayeux, 105, Alfred Gwynn Vanderbilt's Loser Weeper, 106; Brookmeade Stable's Going Away, 105; Richard E. Carter's Oriole, 102, and Beverley Broun's Magna Charta, 100.

Chicle II earned his top weight through victories in Hialeah's Bougainville and Miami Beach Handicaps on the turf, in the Gulfstream Handicap and his second in the Gallant Fox.

Royal Governor needs no introduction to Pimlico fans and his Widener victory and a second in the McLennan at Hialeah are sufficient recommendations. Loser Weeper comes to the Dixie fresh from victories in the Burke and Valley Forge Handicaps and a third in the Gallant Fox.

Double Brandy was one of the Maryland stars of last fall, winning the Bryan and O'Hara and Grayson; Bayeux was third in the Pimlico Cup; Going Away was second to Chicle in both the turf races at Hialeah while Oriole, a recent winner was runner-up to Double Brandy last season in the Bryan-O'Hara.

Slam Bang, making a comeback, was beaten less than three lengths in the Valley Forge; Curandero was fourth in that stake and Magna Charta has been racing locally.

John Gilbert will ride Chicle, Chris Rogers is on Royal Governor, Jack Robertson on Double Brandy, William Balzearetti on Slam Bang, Nick Combest on Loser Weeper, William Downs on Going Away and R. J. Martin on Curandero.

Kalluki, $2100 Buy, Wins Pimlico Feature

Pimlico, Md., May 12.—Dave Coplin's Kalluki, purchased for $2100 as a yearling, turned in a near-record effort here today and won the Whirlaway in rather easy fashion. H. E. Ortel's Tamale was second in the juvenile sprint, with Yarrow Brae Farm's Big Bull third. A field of eight competed over a fast track and through a light rain.

Saddled by B. P. Bond and ridden by Mike Basile, the winning son of Tintagel was clocked in :53 for the four and a half furlongs, only two-fifths over the track record held by Hasteville. Backers of the fleet gelding collected a $10.40 win mutuel.

Kalluki simply took command at the break and there were no catchers. Both Tamale and Big Bull were under pressure drives at the end, but they were struggling only for second money.

Harvard Tops 12 Crews Today At Annapolis

Annapolis, Md., May 12 (AP).—Harvard shoulders were squared tonight for a challenge by 11 other crews in the Atlantic Seaboard's major regatta, the Eastern sprint championships.

A record fleet of 34 shells was drydocked in the Naval Academy boat house for the three races tomorrow.

Harvard was favored and enjoyed its station in the most auspicious Severn River lane for the East's answer to the transplanting of Poughkeepsie's distance grind to Marietta, Ohio.

Seeded behind Tom Bolles' Crimson sweepswingers were Pennsylvania, MIT, Yale, Cornell and Princeton.

Ranged on either side of the seeded crews, which gained their lanes on previous performances, will be Rutgers, Wisconsin, Boston U., Navy, Syracuse and Columbia.

ABC Throws Its Membership Wide Open to All

Columbus, Ohio, May 12 (AP).—The American Bowling Congress today rescinded a rule restricting membership to "white males." It threw membership wide open.

The 518 delegates needed only 27 minutes to oust the restriction which had been in its constitution charter and bylaws since 1916.

Harassed by lawsuits in Ohio, Illinois, Wisconsin and New York and with a Chicago decision that the restriction was discriminatory, executive directors of the Bowling Congress had recommended that the ban on all nonwhites be dropped.

Bill Bennings . . .

AT PIMLICO.

Dear Folks:

This track has come in for some criticism on the caliber of its racing but no one can deny the first nine days of the sport have been exciting. Seldom has the camera been called upon with more regularity. A check back shows of the 72 races run 54 of them, or 75 percent have required pictures for at least one of the three pay-off positions. There have been 26 photos for first, 18 for second and 10 for third. If you want class with your horse racing, be here for the weekend show. The race with a big league field and should provide a lot of thrills. In fact, few Dixies in the past have, proven dull events. See you on the rail.—BILL.

In Wakefield Case

Chandler Made Only Decision HE Could

By Red Smith

New York, May 12 (NYHT).—Happy Chandler made the only decision he could have made in the Wakefield case. That is, when you figure the form of the horses and the conditions of the race as stated by baseball's little king, it is necessary to agree that the result could not have been otherwise. Not under the existing administration.

Red Smith

The Yankees sold Dick Wakefield to the Chicago White Sox. Wakefield, deciding he had the Sox in a wringer because their need of him was greater than the Yankees', refused to go to Chicago unless the White Sox would pay him $5,625 more than the $16,875 for which he had contracted to play this year.

Chicago's general manager, Frank Lane, said that in that event the deal was off. There had been a condition in the agreement, he said, requiring the Yankees to deliver Wakefield in the flesh. The Yankees' George Weiss said nonsense, Wakefield had been peddled to Chicago in an unconditional deal and he was strictly Lane's baby.

When the case was submitted to Chandler, he decided the deal was off. Weiss and Lane, he said, contradicted each other regarding the terms of their local agreement. Unable to reconcile this difference through their testimony, Chandler had to depend on the written evidence. There wasn't any. Rather, there wasn't enough to be conclusive.

After the deal was made by telephone, Weiss had sent a telegram to Lane stating the terms. But Lane had not replied with a wire of confirmation. Instead, he tried unsuccessfully for two days to get in touch with Weiss.

CHANDLER DOES NOT reveal whether he looked into the question of dates to discover whether Lane tried to reach Weiss before or after Wakefield publicly refused to report. In other words, had Lane considered it a conditional deal from the beginning, or did he only discover the existence of the condition after Wakefield balked?

Chandler found no answer to this question. With no written record to depend on save Weiss's unconfirmed wire, he gave up and called the hand a misdeal. This is, certainly, approved judicial procedure. It is not necessarily an adverse criticism of Chandler to point out that his predecessor, Judge Landis, did not always allow himself to rebound so strictly by the written record. After all, maybe Landis was wrong.

There was, for example, the year that the Phillies, then operated by Gerry Nugent, drafted Rube Melton, the pitcher, from Columbus and then sold Melton to Brooklyn. It was reported that when Nugent selected Melton at the draft meeting, Larry MacPhail, then running the Dodgers, whispered "We got him! We got him!" in hoarse jubliation. Maybe that was the origin of a rumor that went thus:

THE PHILLIES, NATURALLY had first call in the draft because they had, naturally, run last in the National League. They didn't intend to draft anybody, though, because they didn't have the necessary $7500. MacPhail proposed that Nugent draft Melton and sell him to the Dodgers for $15,000. In other words, the Phillies would sell their draft rights to the Dodgers for a $7500 profit. This is, of course, an evasion of the draft rule, illegal under the baseball code.

The rumors got to Landis, who called in Nugent and MacPhail written evidence. Just the same, the judge tossed out the deal; the during the winter meeting. They denied everything. There was no Phillies were stuck with Melton and had to get up the $7500 to pay for him.

Getting back to the Wakefield case, however, it is interesting to follow the player's reasoning. Dick says Chandler has ruled the deal with Chicago illegal and, consequently, he cannot be suspended by the Yankees for refusal to report in an illegal sale. Of course Chandler didn't rule the deal illegal; he merely ruled it no deal. And a player can always be suspended for flagrant insubordination.

Wakefield, signed to play this season at a salary of $16,875, not to play exclusively for the Yankees but, under the contract, to play for the Yankees or any other club to which his contract might be assigned. In some quarters, a contract signed is considered a promise to be lived up to. This does not appear to have occurred to anyone in this case.

George Fazio's 136 Wins Middle Atlantic PGA Title

Bassler Finishes 3 Strokes Back

Baltimore, May 12 (AP).—George Fazio of the Woodmont course in Washington shot a six-under-par 136 today to win the Middle Atlantic Professional Golfers Association championship over the Elkridge Club course.

Fazio combined a morning 66 with an afternoon 70 over the 36-hole test to beat Charlie Basler of Rolling Road by three strokes.

Tied for third at 140 were Jimmy Duke of Bonnie View, Johnny Bass, of Clifton Park, and Jack Isaacs of Langley Field, Va.

A field of 36 golfers teed off in a slow, steady rain this morning, and the rain was still falling when they finished late in the afternoon. Despite the weather, however, eight of the pros either equalled or bettered the 71 par over the 6275-yard course.

Total traffic deaths, 1949 71

A 16-year-old boy died early yesterday in the crash of a stolen truck with another auto here, and two men died in traffic accidents on U. S. 1, northeast of the District.

Police said the stolen truck was driven by Albert Green, 16, of 716 9th st. ne. They said he went through a stop signal at 12th st. and Florida ave. nw., about 2:30 a. m., at "high speed" and collided with an auto driven by Mrs. Sylvia C. Rich, 33, of 7704 Colesville, rd., Hyattsville, Md.

Companion Also Hurt

The truck overturned, throwing Green out, police said. He was pronounced dead at the scene. Another 16-year-old boy, riding with him, was taken to Gallinger Hospital, treated for cuts and bruises, and then taken to the Receiving Home. Subsequently, he complained of pains and was taken back to Gallinger.

Mrs. Rich also was thrown from her auto. Police said her vehicle continued 56 feet beyond the point of collision, and then damaged brick steps at 2300 13th st. nw. Mrs. Rich was treated for cuts and bruises at Gallinger Hospital, questioned and released. She is a dietitian employed in the central office of the Hot Shoppes.

Police said the truck was stolen Thursday. Dr. A. Magruder MacDonald issued a certificate of accidental death.

Early yesterday, a man identified as Cheatly Johnson, 51, of Warrentown, Ga., apparently a hitchhiker, was struck and killed by a hit-run driver on Highway 1, about five miles north of Laurel, Md. Police said he was released Thursday from the Philadelphia (Pa.) House of Correction, and presumably was on his way home.

Judge Quits Retirement to Rule on Case

Gentle-voiced, 71-year-old Judge Jesse Corcoran Adkins came out of retirement yesterday to don the black robes once again and preside on the District Court bench.

Such a return of a judge is a rare happening on Judiciary Square. It was only for 70 minutes, to hear a motion for a new trial in a rape case the judge heard in 1943. He retired in 1946.

Proudest man on hand when the judge arrived was Henry Brodis, who was his messenger for years.

The elevator door opened and gave forth a bald man with sparkling eyes and kind manner, wearing a brown suit, soft blue shirt and blue bow tie.

The two men smiled quietly. Henry took the judge's umbrella and hat.

"Henry is my good friend and long associate," the judge said.

He sat a moment in chambers, talking with reporters.

Then a look at the clock: "Well, I guess it's about time to go. Henry always likes to be on time."

The case was that of Leonard Saunders, sentenced in 1943 to serve 10 to 30 years for a rape conviction. He has served seven of it in Lorton Reformatory.

With the carefulness for which he was famous, and a flash now and then of the old humor, Judge Adkins explored the evidence, then dismissed the motion for a new trial.

Seventy minutes were gone. Henry got him his umbrella and he went out into the rain and back to his home in Ontario Apartments.

Wife-Slayer Gets 5-30 Year Sentence

George T. Henderson, 31, of 1416 Half st. sw., was sentenced yesterday to serve from 5 to 30 years for killing his wife, Mrs. Lordis V. Henderson, 31, last October.

He was indicted on a first-degree murder charge but was allowed to plead guilty to second-degree murder. Judge Alexander Holtzoff of District Court imposed sentence.

Henderson shot and killed his wife during an argument in their home. They were quarreling on her return after spending several days away from it without Henderson's consent, it was charged.

Vanders Baccus, 29, of 634 S st. nw., received a one-to-three-year term for larceny after trust of more than $900. According to the charge, Baccus took the money from a fellow employe and promised to invest it for her in a savings plan. It occurred while they were both employes of the Fuller Products Co. Baccus used the money for his own purposes, it was charged.

Rose Stockwell, 46, of 5717 Colorado ave. nw., received two to six months for forging a $40 check.

Bolling Base Airman's Body Found In River

The body of Corpl. Edward J. Barry, 20, of Waltham, Mass., attached to Bolling Air Force Base, was found yesterday in the Potomac near the Bellevue dock.

He was one of four corporals who disappeared Monday after setting out in a home-made boat they had built. The skiff was found Tuesday, capsized against a pier near where Corporal Barry's body was discovered.

The body was taken to the District Morgue by Harbor Precinct policemen, who with Bolling Base personnel and Navy divers have been searching for the four men. Dr. A. Magruder MacDonald, District coroner, will perform an autopsy today.

The three other corporals, still missing, are James L. Triplett, 22, of Elkins, W. Va., James D. McKee, 18, of Columbus, Ga., and James O. Ramsey, 21, of Gaffney, S. C. All were attached to the 1100th Casual and Service Squadron at Bolling Base.

A bill for continuing the District child day care center program as a permanent municipal project was approved by the Senate yesterday.

The bill now goes to the House. It cleared the Senate without opposition on the motion of Senator Lester C. Hunt (D., Wyo.), chairman of the District fiscal affairs subcommittee.

Senator Margaret Chase Smith (R., Me.) had taken the lead in insisting the day care center program be made permanent, and the Senate adopted the measure in this form.

Year-to-Year Basis

Previous extensions of the day care program have been on a year-to-year basis.

A report on the bill which Hunt filed in the Senate pointed out that the day care centers are for the children of working mothers, and declared:

"Discontinuance of this program would require working mothers to remain at home in order to care for their children. This would materially lower their standard of living and would increase the financial cost to the District and the Federal Government; public assistance and dependency allowances would be in excess of (amounts) presently required to operate the child day care centers."

Under Public Welfare

Some 250 to 300 children are now served in the six day care centers. They are operated under the Board of Public Welfare. The bill continues this setup. This year's program is financed with $100,000 in District funds and about $48,000 in fees paid by the parents.

Before clearing the bill, the Senate adopted an amendment eliminating the $100,000 ceiling on District funds for the program, and instead authorizing "such sums as may be necessary." These sums would later be appropriated in separate legislation.

Policeman Resigns After Side-Job Ban

Policeman Wiliam W. Hitchens of the Bethesda substation, has resigned from the Montgomery County Police Force because he can make more money in his part-time job as photographer.

Hitchen's resignation followed a recent order from Chief of Police Charles M. Orme that policemen must not hold outside jobs.

The Policemen's Association said the men could not feed their families on the salaries paid and have asked increased pay, particularly if they are not to be permitted to have side jobs.

Hitchens said that since his free lance photography pays him more money than the police job, he regarded the police job really as his side job. So he resigned. His resignation has been accepted as of May 19 by County Manager Irving G. McNayr.

County police are asking pay scales commensurate with those paid in Washington for comparable ranks. Some officers said a number of others are considering resigning. Hitchens lives in Viers Mill Village.

Operation Restores Vision Of 115-Year-Old D. C. Woman

The Washington Post

AFTER OPERATION—Mrs. Mary Brooks, 115 years old, now sees well enough to eat from a tray held by Nurse Doris Howe at Gallinger Hospital following an operation for a cataract. Little Sisters of the Poor sent Mrs. Brooks to the hospital to have her feet treated and they asked doctors to try and do something about Mrs. Brooks' sight

Life is better for Mrs. Mary Brooks than it has been many times in the past 30 years. The 115-year-old slave-born woman has her sight again after three decades of total blindness.

At Gallinger Hospital, where surgeons successfully removed a cataract from her right eye, the bright, bird-like little patient is reveling in her new sight. And best of all for her, she said, is the fact that she can see her food. She looks forward from one mealtime to another awaiting the time when she can select the things she eats, and usually, she gets a second helping, Gallinger authorities said.

Sister Matilda, of the Little Sisters of the Poor, in whose home Mrs. Brooks has lived since 1942, said the patient is listed as a native of Prince Georges County, born December 29, 1834. Sister Matilda said Mrs. Brooks has often related her experiences working in vegetable fields as a slave and expressed great affection for "Pappy," who was the slave master.

Her father, Mrs. Brooks related yesterday, was a slave coachman.

She was taken to Gallinger two months ago by Sister Matilda because she suffered pains in her feet, and the nun asked doctors if they could do anything about Mrs. Brooks' sight. They decided they could. The cataract was removed nearly six weeks ago, and her eye was unbandaged three weeks ago, the sight restored. Now, she has glasses that improve her vision.

Surgeons said that the operation was "a routine one, but unusual in view of her age."

Mrs. Brooks will be released from the hospital soon, officials said, to return to the home of the Little Sisters of the Poor.

Gaming Case Evidence Is Ruled Out

District Court Judge Alexander Holtzoff yesterday suppressed gambling evidence seized on Louis Spurgeon Worley, 1017 M st. nw., before the 37-year-old tailor had been arraigned or indicted.

Worley was arrested April 13 without a warrant and police found numbers and horse race betting slips on his person.

His arraignment in Municipal Court was continued when his attorney James Hughes said he was going to file a motion to suppress evidence in District Court. It was this motion Judge Holtzoff granted, on the grounds that the police had no warrant and insufficient evidence to arrest without a warrant.

Honors Paid To Chaplain Of D. C. Jail

The Rev. James L. Pinn, pastor of the Good Will Baptist Church at 1519 U st. nw. was honored last night on his seventy-third birthday and for his 20 years as volunteer chaplain at the District Jail.

In a program in his church, members of his congregation, old friends and correction and rehabilitation officials praised the devotion of the pastor who has walked the last mile with 32 condemned men and has given spiritual aid to an estimated 10,000 jail inmates.

The principal address was made by Dr. J. Harvey Randolph, pastor of the Mount Moriah Baptist Church and president of the Baptist Minsters' Conference of Washington and vicinity.

Dr. Randolph said Mr. Pinn has "traveled over iceclad streets from Federal prisons to the city jail, when driving meant a hazard to his life, without self-interest and moved by altruistic regard for the unfortunate sons and daughters of broken homes."

Sam A. Anderson, assistant superintendent of the jail, said that, thanks to Mr. Pinn, "we have never had a man go to the chair unprepared."

Joseph E. Dayton, director of the D. C. Bureau of Rehabilitation, quoted the late Ray L. Huff, former superintendent of District penal institutions, as saying he would nominate Mr. Pinn as the person who had made the greatest contribution to corrections work in the District.

Prosecution 'Impresses' Judge in Milk Case

Argument Dairies Acted Without Legal Authority Brings Approving Comment

By Joseph Paull
Post Reporter

Judge Alexander Holtzoff declared yesterday that he was "impressed" by at least one argument of the Government in the antitrust milk conspiracy case being tried in District Court.

It is the argument that the defendants violated the law by not seeking the approval of the Secretary of Agriculture in fixing minimum prices to be paid producers for milk in metropolitan Washington.

On trial are the Maryland and Virginia Milk Producers Association, its director, and seven dairies here. Arguments on a motion to acquit were concluded yesterday. Judge Holtzoff set Monday for decision on that motion. If he denies it, the defendants may have to present their witnesses to disprove the conspiracy charge.

Prosecutors Cheered

Government attorneys were heartened by some of the judge's statements yesterday. Up until then, court observers said, his expressed feelings appeared to be against the indictment and against a prosecution where the Government admits there is no viciousness or malevolence.

The judge interrupted Prosecutor Robert H. Winn to say:

"I must confess that I am very much impressed with what you have said."

Winn had argued that the dairy farmers could among themselves fix prices and be within the law. He said that the producers, however, could not combine with the distributors to fix the prices without the express authorization of the Department of Agriculture.

Mutual Agreement Denied

This authorization, Winn said, would make the defendants immune from prosecution under the Sherman Act. Without it, said Winn, they are guilty.

Until 1947, it is admitted, the defendants did have such approval under a marketing order. After that, they disavowed the order.

However, the defense denies that there was any mutual "agreement" or conspiracy to fix prices paid the farmer, the association or the distributor dairies. The defendants contend that they have acted in the public interest in all times, to see that Washington has a steady supply of pure milk of good grade.

The Government charges the distributor dairies operate under actual or implied agreements to take their full supplies from the producers association at fixed prices. Also, it contends the dairies and the association have decided together on the prices consumers must pay.

The defense scoffs at this, saying the dairies could buy from whomever they chose, but that they preferred to buy through the association.

Judge Holtzoff said that he wonders whether or not the producers association is in a "dictatorial position" by which it can dictate to the distributors the price it must pay.

Grand Jury Gets Lansburgh Store Murders Case

The case of the Good Friday murders was presented to a Federal grand jury yesterday.

Assistant United States Attorney Cecil Heflin read to the jurors the signed confession of William A. Tyler, jr., 18, former employe of Lansburgh's & Bro. department store.

Tyler admitted Saturday stabbing two guards to death in the store early on the morning of April 7.

Chief witnesses yesterday were police officers who took the confession and Howard B. Roy, 20, 1858 Alabama ave. se. Roy has told police he and Tyler "cased" the store on April 6 but that he did not accompany Tyler when the latter broke into the store.

Tyler is being held without bond.

Roll of D. C. Volunteer Infantry Called for 52d Year

By William H. Smith
Post Reporter

They called the roll of Company G, First District of Columbia Volunteer Infantry, for the fifty-second consecutive year last night.

Of the 82 members who marched away from the District in 1898 to see action in the Spanish-American War, only 10 were present to sound off for roll call.

But, when the call was completed, the unit was reported "all present and accounted for" by Capt. John F. Bethune, acting commanding officer.

That report reflected the spirit of the annual reunion of Company G at the Hamilton Hotel, where 10 "youngsters" gathered to recall their experiences. Not a single member went unremembered in the anecdotes passed around the dinner table.

The 10 comprise a bare majority of the 19 original members of Company G still alive. They came from as far away as Aiken, S. C. (most live in Greater Washington), and they commented sympathetically as letters were read from the other nine survivors outlining reasons for their inability to attend the reunion.

There wasn't much "war talk." It was, in general, a "glad to see you, how're you doing" session. Balding heads and grandchildren—or great-grandchildren—were the main topics.

Frivolity went by the board in the only formal speech when Bethune expressed pride in the company's contribution to an American way of life which he termed "similar to soldiering together."

"In the Army we got the same uniforms, the same arms and had generally, the same duties," Bethune said. "But it was up to the individual to prove his real worth—and that's the way it is with democracy."

Contrasting the spirit of Company G. members who volunteered because they "felt a responsibility to our Government," Bethune deplored the attitude of present-day youth that "our parents and the Government owe us a living."

These Company G "boys," besides Bethune, were on hand for the reunion: James C. Ambler, 76, Clifton Station, Va.; Harry F. Patterson, 72, 4630 Davenport st. nw.; Charles L. Snell, 72, Aiken, S. C.; George H. Gillman, 71, Baltimore; William J. Driver, 70, 401 11th st. ne.; C. S. Pittman, 76, 58 Bryant st. nw.; Clarence P. Brown, 71, 2815 5th st. ne.; Lee Ross, 75, 3621 Albemarle st. nw., and Harry A. Shinn, 71, 6211 Queens Chapel rd., Hyattsville.

A reunion next year? Emphatically!

Pepco Records Set for April, Four Months

By S. Oliver Goodman

Kilowatt hour sales of Potomac Electric Power Co. trended upward to new all-time highs for April and the first four months.

Consolidated sales for April totaled 173,139,297 kilowatt hours, an increase of 9,903,300 or 6 percent over the same 1949 period. For the District of Columbia alone, sales amounted to 118,623,560 kilowatt hours, up 3.15 percent. The suburban area showed sales of 54,515,737, an upturn of 13 percent.

The city's consumption of electrical energy has shown a smaller rate of increase because of a sharp reduction in sales to Capital Transit Co., which has switched at least one main trolley line to bus service.

For the first four months this year, Pepco's sales reached a new all-time high of 723,835,913 kilowatt hours. This was a gain of 35,306,450 or 5.13 percent over the like 1949 period. The suburban area showed an increase of 11.25 percent, while the city displayed a small gain of 2.55 percent.

New York Cotton

New York, May 12 (AP).—Cotton futures slumped sharply in late dealings today as aggressive liquidation and hedge selling touched off stop-loss orders. The reaction extended to almost $2 a bale before the market rebounded partially on trade buying and short covering. Final levels were 85 cents to $1.40 a bale under the previous close.

Trading Quiet As List Stages Minor Decline

New York, May 12 (AP).—The stock market backed down from a four-year high today.

Steel and auto shares were the first to fall but selling soon spread to other sections, including the railroad group. Most losses were confined to around a point or less.

Despite an increase in turnover when prices were slipping, sales were about even with yesterday—1,790,000 shares against 1,750,000 Thursday.

The market at the start of trade showed a tendency to slip but there was no push to the selling and declines were limited mostly to fractions. Just before noon steel and autos were roughed up a bit and eventually the selling reached into other groups.

Enough support appeared in afternoon trading to lift many issues a little above the lows of the day.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks lost .4 of one point at 77.3. The utility group was unchanged while industrials and rails declined moderately.

Several stocks were affected by corporation news. Great Northern preferred dropped 3⅜ to 38⅝ following word of a reduction in the dividend. Guantanamo Sugar gained a full point at 9⅛ in the wake of a dividend announcement and plans to call the company's preferred stock.

General Motors fell a point to 30½. Fractionally down were Chrysler at 68⅛ and Studebaker, 32½.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, May 12 (AP).—A break in old crop soybean contracts, which ended down the 10-cent daily limit, imparted a case of jitters to the rest of the grain market today. Everything ended weak and in most cases on the day's lows.

The sell-off in soybeans came in the last half of the session, with acute weakness cropping up in the closing 30 minutes. Once May and July got down the 10-cent limit they stayed there, unfilled selling orders overhanging the pit.

Wheat ended 1¼ to 2⅜ lower; corn, 1⅞ to 3⅜ lower; oats, ⅜ to 1½ lower; rye, 2 to 3½ lower; soybeans, 5 to 10 cents lower, and lard, 7 to 15 cents a hundred pounds lower.

Touching off the soybean selling was confirmation in trade circles of a barter deal with Communist-held Manchuria, under which 45,000 tons of American cotton would be exchanged for 60,000 tons of Manchurian soybeans. The beans would be shipped to Japan.

Criticize Bill

Rail Officials Assail Open Shop Plans

A bill to legalize the union shop in the railroad industry, which has the support of railway unions, came under the fire of management spokesmen yesterday.

R. H. Smith, presdient, Norfolk & Western Railway, called union shop agreements "undemocratic."

"It is an affront to civil liberty to compel a man to join a union in order to hold a job," Smith told the House Interstate Commerce Committee.

Under the union shop arrangement, an employe is required to join the union representing his craft 60 days after he is hired.

Jacob Aronson, vice president and general counsel of the New York Central, and P. J. Neff, chief executive officer of the Missouri Pacific, also opposed the bill.

Smith said the union shop is not needed, asserting, "So long as these unions are democratically managed, and demonstrate their ability to serve the best interests of their members, they will have no difficulty in maintaining their memberships."

Smith contended the legislation would deprive railroad workers of "such basic rights as freedom of speech, because there are numerous cases of men being expelled from unions for criticizing their leaders."

Employers Aid 'Filthy' Reds, Murray Says

Atlantic City, N. J., May 12 (AP).—CIO President Philip Murray said today his organization is fighting communism while Congress plays politics with the issue and business groups "are content to sit on their fat rumps."

"American employers are not combating communism, and everybody knows that," Murray told the closing session of the United Steelworkers' convention, adding:

"American employers would rather deal with these filthy rascals, who would sell their trade union down the river tomorrow, rather than to do business with a fighting organization of high-principled American trade union leaders."

The CIO head declared that "employers' associations are content to sit on their fat rumps and contrive means to make more money out of American workers through secret deals they might make with the Communists in America than they are to do business with forthright men of integrity who are leading the bona fide American trade unions."

"I look at this mess of confusion over in the Federal Congress," Murray continued, "where they are playing politics with the issue of communism. It is distasteful and it is discouraging. . . .

"I think that we (the CIO) are the only organization in the United States of America that has taken practical steps to eradicate communism from our movement—the only one. . . .

"Well, we are fighting them and we are going to eliminate them. Don't misunderstand me about that—we are going to do that. There just isn't any question about that."

Murray said he had to be patient and tolerant with Communists during the war because Soviet Russia was an ally. But, when the war ended, he said, he found "that these Red boys, these leaders of those so-called left-wing organizations would continue to follow the party line."

A union spokesman said after Murray's speech the CIO cannot initiate action against individual Communists or fellow travelers. He said a provision of the Constitution bars such individuals from office, but "we cannot prevent them from working."

Antitrust Suit Filed Against 7 Oil Firms

Los Anegels, May 12 (AP).—The Government moved today to force lower gasoline prices with an antitrust suit which also wants to spike California's long-time voluntary oil conservation program.

Seven major oil firms are named in the civil action. The companies denied wrongdoing and pointed out that a United States grand jury last year ended 18 months of studying their records without returning an indictment.

The Government seeks these major points:

Dissolution of the industry's California Conservation Committee and an injunction preventing any voluntary conservation practices not authorized by State law.

Divorcement of wholesale petroleum outlets and retail service stations, except at refineries and marine terminals.

Outlawing price stabilization by one company posting a price list as an alleged guide to other companies.

Outlawing exclusive contracts between a company and an independent service station, which also include accessories sponsored by the contracting company.

No Restrictions

The Government also wants to require that any oil pipelines be available to independents under the same terms as other majors; crude oil or refined petroleum and agreement for exchanging products likewise be available to independents under the same conditions.

Companies named are Standard of California, the Texas So. of New York, Shell of New York, Tidewater Associated of New York, Richfield of Los Angeles, General Petroleum of Los Angeles and Union of California. Total worth of the firms is estimated by the Government at six billion dollars, and their annual run about 700 million dollars.

The suit covers California, Washington, Oregon, Nevada and Arizona. But California is the only State with important production, producing about 16 percent of the Nation's oil.

Herbert A. Bergson, assistant United States Attorney General in charge of the Department of Justice's antitrust division, filed the action. It followed long investigation by William C. Dixon, western antitrust division chief.

To Force Lower Prices

Dixon said the Government's purpose is to force lower prices all along the line—from well to service station pump.

The oil companies contend that the voluntary conservation program does just what it says—conserves a natural resource. But the Government claims that the program operates to prevent oversupply and hold up prices.

Denials of guilt came from the companies, among them:

President Robert L. Minckler of General Petroleum—"General is not part of any monopoly group or conspiracy to restrain trade: We will resist these untruthful charges."

President T. S. Petersen of Standard — "Standard of California emphatically denies that it has violated the antitrust laws." laws."

President Charles S. Jones, Richfield—"The charges against Richfield are ridiculous and false and Richfield welcomes the opportunity to expose the ignorance and folly of Attorney General McGrath and his antitrust lawyers inherent in this suit."

The seven companies named own nearly 50 percent of the State's producing outlets and have control of another 40 percent, Dixon said. The conservation program operates by setting production quotas at the field, which vary from year to year.

MORE than a thousand persons turned out in the driving rain for the dedication of Gunston Hall as a national shrine yesterday. Vice President Barkley, sheltered by a small rear porch of the carefully restored home of Patriot George Mason who authored the Virginia Bill of Rights, made the dedication address. The house, about 5 miles from Mount Vernon in Fairfax County, Va., is in the custody of the National Society of the Daughters of Colonial Dames

Gunston Hall Dedicated

1,200 in Rain Hear 'Veep' Speak

By Norma Lanum

Patriotism and the Vice President of the United States drew approximately 1200 persons to Gunston Hall, Va., yesterday in spite of the rain, when the colonial estate built by George Mason was dedicated as a national shrine.

Vice President Barkley, without the missus, was guest speaker at the program held on the muddy lawn of the estate. Some guests crowded under canvas canopies, others were sheltered by the big ash and tall fir tree which stood at either side of the porch on which the Vice President stood, or the unusually tall box bushes for which the estate is famous.

The Vice President first apologized for not having brought Mrs. Barkley with him. "She's out in St. Louis surrendering the apartment from which I snatched her," he explained. "She's living with me now you know," he said with a smile.

Admires Society

The Veep went on to express his admiration for the National Society of the Daughters of Colonial Dames, trustees of Gunston Hall. The last private owner, the late Louis Hertle, former Chicago department store executive, deeded the house to the State of Virginia with the Colonial Dames to act as trustees.

The Kentucky-born Vice President said that he was really a son of Virginia, since Kentucky was a county of Virginia at the time patriot George Mason built his house in 1755 on a 5000-acre tract on the Potomac just south of Mount Vernon.

Tracing the history of George Mason, Mr. Barkley pointed out that the Virginia patriot was actually the author of the phrase, "Life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness." It was at Gunston Hall that Mr. Mason drafted the Virginia Declaration of Rights, forerunner of the Bill of Rights which includes this immortal concept.

Presented by Battle

Virginia's Governor, John S. Battle, introduced Mr. Barkley, stating that the guest of honor believed in the same principles of government that had been established at Gunston Hall. He also pointed out that the Vice President studied law at the University of Virginia. "We take some credit for him, too," he said.

In an invocation address, the Rev. Clarence Buxton, pastor of Pohick Church, expressed hope that there was sunshine in the spirit within even though the sunshine was missing without. Historical Pohick Church lies halfway between Mount Vernon and Gunston Hall. In fact, it is said that George Washington paced out the distances between them in surveying the land.

Mrs. Thomas Streeter of Morristown, N. J., national vice president of the patriotic society which has custody of the shrine, opened the program. Mrs. Herbert A. Claiborne of Richmond, Va., first regent of the board of regents of Gunston Hall outlined future plans for restoration of the shrine. The modern kitchen which was added to the original building by Mr. Hertle, will be removed. The modern heating system will go, too. Also the second floor of the Georgian colonial brick house will be partitioned into nine separate little bedrooms as it was when Mason and his nine children lived there.

The society plans also to build small buildings at either side of the house, where originally stood the kitchens and school. The society will clear away any modernization of the grounds and restore the garden to what they believe it was like in colonial days. Remaining will be the huge box bushes which border the path leading from the house to the river.

Among the hundreds who came despite the rain, were members of the Daughters of Colonial Dames from as far away as California. Others there were Leslie Biffle, secretary of the Senate; former Secretary of the Navy John L. Sullivan, and the new president of the Daughters of the American Revolution, Mrs. James B. Patton.

Science Keeps You Young

Don't Grow Old—Just Grow Up!

This is the last in a series of articles on keeping young.

By Ida Jean Kain

THERE are many wonderful things about middle age, one being that by that time, we have at least begun to work out a philosophy to live by. Then instead of the zest for living waning, it deepens. We develop new perspective, and grow. And that is the essence of keeping young . . . to continue to grow mentally.

Nobody grows old—we get old when we stop growing. Overstreet in his book "The Mature Mind" says, "Don't grow old . . . grow up." Life, according to this practical philosopher, should be a constant mounting to successive levels. That's growing.

On the physical score, there is no sharp dividing line between ages. We are not young one year and old the next. There is a gradual blending of youth into middle age, and a mellowing of middle age into later years.

IRENE DUNNE . . . a deep spiritual faith keeps this actress radiantly young

Years Divided In Four Periods

AND happily, the rate of aging diminishes as we get on. There is a nice long period in middle age when the passing of time is almost imperceptible. That's the reason for the heartening greeting, "My dear, you haven't changed a bit."

The years seem to be divided roughly into four periods. There is an average of 20 years to grow; 20 in which to challenge life and 20 to hold our own. But since science has extended our years by almost 20, a good 10 of them can be inserted into the middle period . . . and for 30 years we can hold our own. Then come the bonus years of comfort, now available to an ever-increasing number of people.

Many authorities stress that the most aging factor of all is the fear of age . . . the dread of advancing years, and that old age must first exist in the mind before it becomes a reality.

Perhaps We Needn't Age

AND there are intrepid folks who claim that we need not get old at all, and that the belief that we must get old is based on unsound ideals and race instinct which, rooted in our subconscious mind, proceed to make us old.

This may seem startling, but one lecturer I listened to on this promising idea, I judged to be a vigorous fifty . . . investigation proved him to be a hale eighty!! His advice is to continue to grow mentally, to live by faith instead of fear, and to impress on your subconscious mind that you don't have to get old and feeble. Never say, "At my age I can't change" or "At my age I can't expect to be as alert . . ." Why can't you?

Don't let an obsession with the years lessen the joy of expectancy. Time may be passing . . . but isn't it also arriving? So live all the days of your life! With a zest for living, you'll never lose the knack of staying young.

Middle age can be vigorously young . . . or bordering on old. To paraphrase Shaw's classic remark about youth being wasted on children: Middle age is a wonderful time . . . too bad to waste it on prematurely old folks!

'Mayden's Choice' Dance Puts Sulgrave 'Stag Line' in Skirts

By Marie McNair

THE STAG line wore skirts, corsages of radishes, turtles, fish — anything but flowers — were pinned to the lapels of "white ties and tails."

What goes on, you say? Why, the "Mayden's Choice" dance last night at the Sulgrave Club.

The same group which put on the Leap Year dance two years ago, had been importuned ever since to give another. So—this was it!

It was the ladies who did the cutting in; ladies who escorted their beaux to the ball, who fetched the supper and the champagne.

The lure of Meyer Davis, here from New York to play, got almost everybody to the club on time—around 10:30—and the dance floor was crowded from there on in. The routine was broken only once, and that for the "lucky number" dance, with the last couple left on the floor winning bottles of champagne.

Dinner Parties Given by Many

THE Clark Cliffords had 32 for dinner before the dance. Mrs. Robert Low Bacon, Mr. and Mrs. Chauncey Parker and the Edward Burlings also entertained at dinners.

Mr. and Mrs. Bradley Nash had two dinner parties going on in their house, one of their own friends, another with Mrs. Nash's daughter, Miss Lucy Hoffmann, hostess to some of her young set.

Captain and Mrs. Edwin Graves swelled the stag line with thirteen women whom they entertained first at dinner along with seven men. The party was arranged in honor of Senora de Espil, wife of the former Argentine Ambassador, a visitor in town. Ranking guests were the Danish Ambassador and Madame de Kauffmann, Madame van Kleffens, wife of the Netherlands Ambassador. Others sitting down to a table decorated with a fish bowl filled with marine life corsages for the gentlemen were: Senator and Mrs. J. William Fulbright, Senator and Mrs. Millard Tydings, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Davies, Mrs. Chapman Rose, back for a visit from Cleveland, Mrs. Curtis Munson, Mrs. Robert Olds, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Krock, Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Cox, and Mrs. Amory Perkins from Middleburg, Va. Favors for the ladies were squirters filled with champagne.

Benefit to Aid Girls' Town Work in Italy

The American Council for Domus Nostra, a "Girls' Town" operating in Italy, is making plans for a benefit to be held in Washington.

Domus Nostra, a home located on an estate at Grottaferrata on the outskirts of Rome, now houses about 30 girls who would otherwise be homeless or living in unwholesome atmospheres.

The American Council, founded in May, 1947, is now working to enlarge the Home, since there are so many requests for admission. Girls from 8 to 18 are housed there, taught to cook, sew, do other household chores as well as being given formal and spiritual education.

Mrs. Maria Tinto Rocca, executive director of Domus Nostra, is a former Washingtonian, widow of Professor Joseph C. Rocca who taught at Georgetown and Catholic universities. Mrs. Rocca worked with UNRRA in Italy and later returned to organize Domus Nostra. The Italian home is conducted somewhat like Father Flanagan's "Boys' Town."

Domus Nostra is the only home for girls conducted by the laity in Italy although there are several boys' organizations, the American Council points out.

Early Hemingway Is Padded to Fit

By Richard L. Coe

"UNDER MY SKIN," at the Capitol, boasts an unusual setting, several goodish characters and a comparatively exceptional treatment of the relationship between an erring father and an adoring son.

Based on an Ernest Hemingway short story, it betrays what happens when the screen tries to make short stories into feature-length material: padding. And the padding is dullish.

It's the story of an American jockey who's apparently worked himself out of mounts in the United States and is quickly finding fewer and fewer tracks in Europe where he's welcome. He's not an admirable type, but his love for a son, aged about 10, is the real force of his life. In Casey Robinson's screen adaptation, a good and beautiful Parisian cafe singer enters the yarn. She loves but does not admire the jockey, but the son wins her heart.

Robinson patiently had to do something to build this brief Hemingway original into feature length. By the use of unusual settings —upper Italy and real-life Paris—and with Micheline Prelle, who was so fine in "Devil in the Flesh, as the woman, his padding has its points.

But the essential flaw in his adaptation is that he has had to shift the viewpoint. The charm of Hemingway's original was that the story was told through the little boy's eyes and words, and that enough of the father's faults showed through to make the reader recognize his true character. It was a question of artful writing.

The story, by the way, was one of a collection called "In Our Time," which appeared in 1925 and drew first attention to Hemingway. It's perfectly possible that the author might have told the story from the more objective viewpoint adapted by his adapter, but the fact that he didn't gave the yarn its charm.

There are some exciting and touching moments in "Under My Skin." You're gripped at the outset when the father escapes a ruthless gambling trio by the skin of his teeth; you're interested in the relationships with other jockeys, and that final steeplechase is a diller.

And no picture which introduces Miss Prelle to the American screen is without merit. Her beauty is more than fetching and she gives quality to a role that's been played many times before.

John Garfield is fine as the father, even though we now see him from the outside and not from the boy's angle. Orley Lindgren is the youngster and does nicely. The picture appears to have been made abroad, though I find no studio credits to such a fact.

Jean Negulesco directed as efficiently as the Robinson screen play allows. And Miss Prelle sings several songs that sound French, but aren't. Jacques Surmagne wrote the words to music by Alfred Newman.

BILL FARRELL headlines the Capitol's stage bill, a young man of vast popularity on Metro records and with a stage singing style about as freewheeling as they come . . . Bill sings the day's most popular ballads as though he were born with them in his mouth, flailing about like the Mighty Mo's props . . . It's quite a performance, not for me, but decidedly for the younger set . . . Tim Herbert and Don Saxon, two comics who've been around successfully, handle the laughs, with the Youman Brothers, Francis and Ted and Flo Vallett completing the bill.

"UNDER MY SKIN," a 20th Century-Fox release, produced by Casey Robinson, directed by Jean Negulesco, screen play by Robinson, based on the story by Ernest Hemingway. At the Capitol.

Mt. Vernon Players Aim High

MUCH TO the credit of the Mount Vernon Players in the double bill with which they are closing their season. The group will be presenting Richard Harrity's "Hope Is the Thing With Feathers" and Kurt Weill's "Down in the Valley" through the twenty-seventh, Sunday nights excepted.

What makes this so interesting an offering is the fact that both works are new and elsewhere have evoked admiration. Both are slight trifles in a harried world, both make much of a stylish simplicity and both are deserving of performance. While the group necessarily is limited productionwise, by giving both works a hearing it is performing a service others in town would do well to note.

Harrity's one-act play is the curtain-raiser, initially put on by a small off-Broadway group and later joined to a Sartre play for a Broadway and Chicago run. The setting is Central Park, the characters vagrants in search of food and sleep on park benches. The writing style approximates a pruned O'Neill, and readers of Orwell's "Down and Out in Paris and London" may note strains of similarity. One tramp is obsessed with the idea of catching a duck in the lake for a meal. Sharing with other down-and-outers goes without saying. There is a warming, slice-of-life quality, and the production does honestly by Harrity's script.

Of the players, directed by Donald B. Muir, Robert Huey and Jimmy Lithgow are the most important—the hopeful hunter and his pal of six weeks' standing. Terry Gallegos, as a punch drunk fighter, and John Burke, especially, as a hopeful old man, are splendid. Others in the good cast include William McCue, George Lytle, William Vorenberg and Edward Fowler and James Bassford.

The Weill opera, to words by Arnold Sungaard stems from a musing by Charles MacArthur six years ago. He wondered if an American folk opera could be successfully constructed from a popular folk tune. Sundgaard settled on "Down in the Valley," the wistful story of Thomas Bouche, and its initial performances were made for radio and TV.

Of the short opera's cast, Johnny O'Beirne is outstanding, a sound voice in a prepossessing form. Jeannine Booth is the sweet-voiced Jennie Parsons, and William McClellan the lonely fellow who breaks from prison to see if the gal he loves honestly loves him. Both catch a certain style of the song and movement, although, like the balance of their associates, they are not the professional artists required.

A first-nighter suspects that ease of familiarity will improve future performances.

U. S. Ballet Troupe in Paris Meets 'Guerilla' Warfare

Paris, May 12 (AP).—A visiting American ballet troupe today was fighting off an undeclared guerilla warfare led—so the Americans said—by Serge Lifar of the Paris Opera Ballet Corps.

The troupe, the Page-Stone Ballet Company of New York, opened at the fashionable Theater des Champs-Elysees, and promptly ran into an almost unprecedented hail of boos and catcalls.

Today Thomas Fisher, troupe business manager, asserted Monday night's boos were the concerted work of Lifar and his followers in the Paris Opera, in retaliation for demonstrations against Lifar in New York City in the fall of 1948. The City Center Theater was picketed by persons protesting Lifar's appearance. Posters denounced him as a Nazi collaborator. Lifar was cleared of the collaboration charges later.

"Lifar's friends bought a block of seats in the balcony," said Fisher. "They arranged it so that the whistles (boos in a French audience) came from different sections of the hall. The volume was raised after each number."

Lucas Hoving, a member of the troupe, said Lifar's protege, M. Renault, told him that night:

"We are going to make it impossible for an American ballet troupe to appear in Paris after what happened in New York."

Hammill and Reichenbach were also charged with not having a pawnbroker's license. Two charges of buying and receiving stolen property were placed against Waltern. They were released on the same bond as the others, however.

Four persons had already been charged with receiving stolen property in the case.

ECA Funds Used To Rebuild Casino, Wherry Indicates

Senator Wherry (R., Nebr.) yesterday proposed the Senate's Crime Investigating Committee look into a report that $12,000 is being used from Marshall Plan funds to rebuild a French gambling casino.

Wherry said the committee should call Paul Hoffman, Marshall Plan boss, to testify. But Chairman Kefauver (D., Tenn.) of the inquiry panel said he thought it was "out of our field."

Tibet-Peiping Talks Set

Calcutta, India, May 12 (AP).—The leader of an eight-man delegation from Tibet, Tsepon Shakabpa, today said his party is leaving for Hongkong in June to discuss Tibet's relations with Chinese Communists.

Highway Span Traffic Tops Estimates

The number of vehicles using the two Highway Bridges is exceeding estimates by more than 10,000 a day.

Douglas S. Brinkley, District Highway Department planning chief, said a count showed 87,300 vehicles crossed the two bridges in a 24-hour period ending at 9 a. m. yesterday. About 1100 more vehicles entered the District over the new bridge than left it on the old span, he said.

The old bridge carried about 68,000 vehicles a day when it was used for two-way traffic, Brinkley said. This figure was expected to increase to 75,000 to 77,000 with the opening of the new bridge Tuesday.

The traffic load is expected to decrease, Brinkley said, after repairs which close Memorial Bridge at night are completed and sightseers have satisfied their curiosity about the new Highway Bridge.

British Trawler Seized by Reds Docks in Norway

Oslo, Norway, May 12 (AP).—The British fishing trawler Etruria arrived tonight at the Norwegian Port of Honingsvaag after being released by the Soviets at Murmansk.

The trawler was seized in the White Sea May 1 on charges of illegally operating in Russian waters.

Release of the Etruria and her crew of 21 was arranged after an exchange of notes between the British and Soviet governments and payment of a $75 fine. The trawler's catch was confiscated.

Russians "Took" Them, U. S. Fur Men Charge

New York, May 12 (U.P.).—The Associated Fur Manufacturers reported today that they had been "taken" by the Russians in a friendly fur trade.

In response to a request from Russian fur breeders, the association said, American mink breeders agreed to swap 12 live minks in various United States-developed color mutations for 12 live Russian sables, to give fur breeding a boost in both countries. The sables arrived but failed to breed. Investigation revealed they had been sterilized, the association said.

Two-Headed Turtle Steps Out To the Races—Turtle Races

There'll be a real double-header among the numerous attractions at the annual Seminary Fair in Alexandria today.

It's Siamese Sue, Washington's only two-headed turtle. She will be on hand to view the fifth annual Northern Virginia Turtle Sweepstakes, one of the fair features slated to get under way when the show opens on the grounds of the Virginia Theological Seminary at 1 p. m.

It will be the first time Sue has left her sanctuary in the Commerce Department aquarium, where she has been on exhibit since last December. Special permission for her appearance was given by John H. Pearson, aquarium director, who plans to escort her personally to the fair.

The turtle race, for which about 20 entries are expected, is only one of a wide range of attractions. There will be pony rides, a miniature train, side shows, novelty contests, clowns and the usual popcorn, peanuts and balloons.

The fair, in its sixteenth year, is sponsored by the Women's Auxiliary of Immanuel Church-on-the-Hill, assisted by students of the seminary. Proceeds will go to the home and foreign missions work of the Episcopal Church.

Boy, Trapped by Police, Hurt In 20-Foot Leap From Porch

A 20-foot jump from a second-floor porch was unavailing yesterday for a 12-year-old boy, who, with a 9-year-old companion, was taken to the Receiving Home.

Police received a call about 3:30 p. m. to the home of Rudolph Mason, 5004 Hayes st. ne., with information that someone was breaking in. They cornered the boys on the second floor and seized the younger. But the older fled to the porch and threatened to jump if the policemen came closer.

They tried to dissuade him, they said, but he jumped anyway, and was caught. Examination at Gallinger Hospital showed he suffered only a sprained ankle.

Capt. Paul Barnes, of the Fourteenth Precinct, said the same boys were caught earlier this week looting another home in the same neighborhood. That time they were released to their parents. No one was in the Mason home yesterday when the boys entered.

A DREAM HOUSE ON A HILL WITH A DREAM OF A VIEW
—IN—
Prince Georges County, Md. Out New Hampshire Ave. Ext.
THIS HOME has the exclusive features of an original California Cottage and a huge picture window opening onto a cement terrace which overlooks the city, a good sized dining area, 2 large bedrooms each with tremendous floor-to-ceiling closets, wonderful kitchen equipped with steel cabinets, garbage disposal, Frigidaire and automatic washer, large modern bath and venetian blinds throughout. The attic is completely finished and is ideal for a children's playroom or can be used as a spare bedroom since it also has a double roll-away bed.
The garden is unusually large and beautifully landscaped. The owner and his wife have spent most of their spare time making improvements around the house which would cost thousands of dollars if done by outside labor.
Rooms are tastefully furnished with modern furniture; drapes and cornices were made by an outstanding interior decorator. Furnishings of entire home, except a few living room pieces included in sale price. The owner, a prominent physician, and head of a large medical institute, has been transferred out of the city, so the house is priced for quick sale. Must be seen to be appreciated. Substantial cash down payment is required.

New Machine Helps Study of Tissues

Virginian's Device

Scales Can Weigh Next To Nothing

Roanoke, Va., May 12 (Spl.).—Scientists were told today of a set of scales to accurate it can weigh next to nothing.

The scales can detect a weight change of one billionth of a gram. It is as though a scale large enough to weigh a swimming pool were also fine enough to register the substraction of a single drop of water from the pool.

The scientists at the Virginia Acadamey of Science, where the scales were described, aren't interested, of course, in swimming pools, with or without the extra drop of water. But sensitive scales are a matter of importance.

Dr. Jesse W. Beams, University of Virginia physicist, suggested how his new megnetic suspension balance might be used to measure changes in weights too tiny to be seen with the unaided eye. He has already given science one powerful tool in the ultracentrifuge with which the fastest man-made rotary speeds have been obtained.

This new balance is operated by a complex series of scientific principles which Dr. Beams outlined today before the Virginia Academy of Science meeting here.

He explained its operation this way:

A small rotor is suspended within a vacuum. Upon the upper edge of the rotor a beam of light is focused. Weight changes may cause the rotor to rise into the light beam, setting in motion a series that can be calculated.

Actually the balance won't be used to weigh single particles, because man cannot handle particles so small. It will be used to measure weight changes, such as those that occur during a chemical reaction. It is in this and similar fields that scientists will be able to make use of this tool.

By N. S. Haseltine
Post Reporter

Roanoke, Va., May 12.—Development of a new machine which biologists say should greatly speed studies of life itself was reported here today by a Richmond anatomist.

The device—climax of five years of research—was perfected by Dr. Erling S. Hegre, associate professor of the Medical College of Virginia in Richmond.

With it, Dr. Hegre told Virginia biologists assembled here, he has been able to reconstruct with microscopic precision whole human and animal embryos, down to their last red blood cells.

It should prove equally important, biologists said, in all laboratory studies for better understanding of the microscopic structures of both plants and animals. It should prove particularly valuable, they said, in comparison studies between healthy and diseased tissues.

Wins Top Award

Dr. Hegre's paper, reporting on his machine and its use, won for him the Virginia Academy of Science's top award for outstanding research, it was announced here tonight.

Heretofore, all laboratory reconstructions of embryos, tissues and organs have been labeled "free construction," a frank admission of failure to rebuild the embryo, tissue or organ in true relation to itself.

The present method of such study consists of slicing down specimens embedded in wax or plastic, uncurling and staining the shaved-off bits and reconstructing each slice to build up a whole, but partitioned model.

Besides being a slow, exacting process, the method results in either distorted models, or incomplete reconstructions. The distortions result from ultra-thin slicing, while thicker slices fail to uncover all the microscopic structures within the specimen.

Process Explained

Dr. Hegre reported his new machine and technique to the section on biology of the Virginia Academy of Science, in 28th annual scientific meetings here at Hotel Roanoks. The sessions, attended by some 1000 Virginia scientists, will end at noon Saturday.

The Hegre method also slices down the specimens, but does not use the distorted shavngs. Instead, the operator photographs in series the top, undistorted surface of the specimen after each ultrathin slice has been taken. From these color pictures, it is then possible to reconstruct the whole specimen in all its delicate parts.

Dr. Hegre noted that in his work he can successfully partition an embryo, tissue or organ in slicings of two-micron thickness. In the present laboratory method, it is necessary to slice at 10-micron thicknesses to avoid distortion. And since a red blood cell is about 7½ microns thick, many of these as well as even finer constituents of the specimen are missed.

His instrument consists of a standard microtome, the device for ultra-thin slicing, and attachments for automatic staining of the specimen surface after each swipe of the cutting blade. As the double carriage of knife and stainer completes its operation, it trips the camera shutter to film the specimen.

This new method takes a regular work week to partition a four-week-old human embryo, roughly one-half an inch long. But its speed is cyclonic compared to the old process.

Dr. Guy Horsley, Richmond practicing surgeon, was installed as president of the academy at a banquet tonight. He succeeds Dr. Boyd Harshbarger, statistician of Virginia Polytechnic Institute.

Hospital Day Marked Here By Hundreds

Hundreds of Washingtonians got a behind1the-scenes glimpse into hospital life yesterday as Washington area hospitals held tours and open houses.

The events were in connection with the twenty-ninth annual National Hospital Day, held on the 130th birthday of Florence Nightingale, famous nurse.

Visitors saw emergency rooms, laboratories, X-ray, maternity wards and other hospital facilities.

Boy, 9, Given $15,183 For Loss of an Arm

President Truman has signed a bill to award $15,183 to 9-year-old Norman Otis Pippin of Heber, Calif., for the loss of an arm.

His left arm was sheared off in a collision between an automobile and an Army truck near Westmorland, Calif., September 13, 1943.

The boy's grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Pippin, Heber, will get $25 for damage to their auto.

The Gallup Poll

Men Really Prefer Brunettes By 2-to-1 Vote, Survey Shows

By George Gallup
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princton, N. J., May 12.—Gentlemen may prefer blondes in the hilarious musical comedy of that title now showing on Broadway, but in real life they go for brunettes, judging by a recent survey of male preference.

Brunettes finish 2-1 over blondes in this survey. Of course the fact that the great majority of women are brunettes may have something to do with it.

Redheads are favored by one in every eight males questioned. One man in every five can't decide which type he likes the best.

Taking time out from public opinion surveys on world affairs customs and preferences of homo Americanus, the American Institute of Public Opinion put this question to a properly balanced cross-section of American males throughout the country:

"Which do you like BEST—blondes, brunettes or redheads?"

Here is the vote:

Brunettes	43%
Blondes	23
Redheads	12
Can't decide	22
	100%

The older a man gets, the less inclined he is to have a definite opinion about his choice.

Among men 50 years of age or over, 28 percent said they had no particular preference, as compared to 15 percent among men under 30 years of age.

Here is the vote by age groups:

Brunettes	50%	45%	36%
Blondes	24	24	22
Redheads	11	11	14
Can't decide	15	20	28
	100%	100%	100%

The predominance of brunettes in the American population is indicated in a survey conducted in 1947 by the Institute. This survey showed that fewer than one in ten are blondes. In the study a cross-section of the men and women was asked:

"How would you describe the color of your hair?"

Here were the results:

Brown hair	48%
Gray or white	22
Black	14
Blonde	8
Red	7

An additional one percent said they were totally bald.

RCA Is Showing Off Its Latest Color TV

By Sonia Stein

APPROPRIATELY housed in an Arabian Nights-type green and white silk tent, RCA is showing its latest color television magic to the public for the first time at the National Guard Armory where the Home Show opened last night.

Handicapped by the fact that it is showing equipment so recently developed that it has only two sets available for use here, RCA is funneling the crowd into one end of the tent and out the other as rapidly as it can. No seats are provided.

In addition to its regular 3 p. m. color test which WNBW has been airing daily for several months for testing purposes, RCA will show a few other variety shows throughout the evening, and will try to provide color slides during the in-between hours.

No one who has seen rival CBS' color system in use is apt to be much impressed with the RCA color, since it is pale and cold and seems to lack true color fidelity. But nobody can fail to be impressed with the engineering marvel they are watching. The picture tubes used in the RCA receivers contain 351,000 separate little dots of colored phosphor, each one activated for a split second at a time. The whole idea is staggering. Eventually—definitely before the sets would be made available to the public—this number will be increased to improve the fine detail of the pictures. It may take twice the number of phosphor dots or it may take somewhere between the current number and double the number.

One of the reasons the tube itself is the exciting phenomenon to watch at the demonstration is that it can be used with any color TV system the Federal Communications System may decide is best after all the evidence is in late this month.

Whatever system is adopted—the CBS field sequential system, RCA's dot sequential system (a dot principle unrelated to the color dots on the tube face) or the Color Television Inc. line sequential system—it will undoubtedly use RCA's multi-color single tube receivers just as soon as RCA has them in final shape and in production. And RCA has said, through General David Sarnoff, chairman of the board, that it could start to produce a tiny trickle of them by June of next year.

The RCA color TV demonstrations which started last night will continue through the end of the Home Show, May 31.

FILMING TV shows leads to fine complications. Edward Everett Horton, star of ABC-TV's Thursday night "Holiday Hotel," which is telecast "live," nonetheless found himself competing with himself in Toronto, where the show is seen from Buffalo via kinescope on Mondays, since Buffalo cannot get the show "live." Horton opened in "On Approval" at 8:30 p. m. Monday in the Royal Alex Theater, and opened in "Holiday Hotel" at the very same moment in living rooms all over the city.

Horton, who comes to the Shirlington Theater in Virginia next week, will go to New York Thursday to do his TV show and then hustle back.

This urgent necessity to keep working all the time he explains this way: "If you do one TV show, you are all through in one day and then what do you have to do? If you occupy yourself going to the theater a few times, having friends to lunch and dinner, you're broke, so you have to do some work on the outside anyway."

Horton is an amazingly quick study, has no trouble learning his TV lines. "I've always been like that, even as a child," he says, and adds that he is glad to note that "having a child's mind" stands him in good stead today.

It's the production staff that really seems to suffer through that show. Compressing a musical comedy with all its components into a half hour is practically impossible. Says Edward Duryea Dowling, who stages it, "It's like sending a crack express train whizzing down the track. It's got to get to its destination on time, and yet you have to let it go off onto sidings and get it back on the main track a half a dozen times. Every Thursday night it looks impossible."

Md. Official Studies 'Duty' At Va. Resort

Baltimore, May 12 (AP).—Attorney General Hall Hammond is checking today to see if Maryland is "morally obligated" to act against gambling and whisky sales in Maryland waters just off a small Virginia resort town.

Colonial Beach Mayor Norman Brewington said Governor Lane was "morally obligated" to stop what he terms the "subterfuge to avoid Virginia law."

Virginia statutes prohibit both slot machines and sale of whisky by the drink. The whisky sales are legal in Maryland, and slot machines are permitted by law in St. Marys County, across the Potomac from the Virginia resort.

Two piers extending into the Potomac, under Maryland management since Colonial days, are in use now for slot-machine gambling. Two more piers and a pleasure barge are scheduled to open soon.

Last night the Colonial Beach town council voted four to one to send the town's mayor to Richmind for a conference with Virginia's Governor Battle.

The question of a launch—a water cab service from shore to the barge. The Pleasure Island did not come up before the council, presumably pending the outcome of the conference with the Governor. The ship's owners had previously asked the council for permission to use the city pier.

Penny Milk Head Named

The District Commissioners yesterday appointed Ernest E. Padgett superintendent of the Penny Milk and Food Conservation program. Padgett, now steward and purchasing officer of the Industrial Home School, succeeds the late Harry M. Gardner.

Saving Souls

Bishop Grace In Court for Crowding

Bishop "Daddy" Grace was haled into Municipal Court yesterday because too many of his three million followers jam into his 7th st. Prayer House at the same time.

Some 15 of the followers, including four "soldiers" in resplendent blue, red and gold uniforms, jammed their way into the small office of Assistant Corporation Counsel Clark King for a hearing.

Specifically, the spiritual rival of Father Divine was charged with failing to keep clear the aisles of the United House of Prayer, 1721½ 7th st. nw., and failing to have an occupancy permit for their building.

Representatives from the office of the fire marshal say that the building has a capacity of 500, but twice that many attend "Daddy" Grace's prayer meetings, and constitute a fire hazard.

"Your business is to save souls," Fire inpector H. M. Maddox said. "Ours is to save lives."

For some 20 minutes King and Grace argued and quoted the Bible at each other, and the matter was finally settled when "Daddy" turned to one of his followers and said "Elder, you hear what the man says. Take care of that matter, right away."

Grace, a stout man with flowing, foot-long gray hair and inch-long fingernails, told King "All my trouble is jealousy among the preachers. I'm a citizen. I got lots of properties here. I admire the District. I speak well of the District wherever I go through the country. They can't put the finger on me."

Throughout the interview, one follower set near Grace, her hand upraised and a handkerchief covering her fingers. Grace's buff-colored 10-gallon hat rested on the handkerchef.

ABC Charge Against Store Is Dismissed

The District Alcoholic Beverage Control Board yesterday dismissed for lack of sufficient evidence a charge that a retail liquor store received and kept on its premises stolen beer.

Cleared by the action was Lane's Liquor Locker, Inc., 3108-10 Rhode Island ave., ne. It had been charged with receiving 43 cases of beer stolen from an interstate shipment a year ago.

The Government's key witness, an FBI agent, was forbidden by the Justice Department to testify at an ABC Board hearing last month on the ground public discussion of his information might compromise FBI sources.

Son of Judge Steuer Hangs Self at School

Deerfield, Mass., May 12 (U.P.).—The 15-year-old son of a New York judge hanged himself from a tree near the fashionable private school he attended.

The body of James Edward Steuer, son of Supreme Court Justice Aaron Steuer and grandson of the late New York criminal lawyer Max Steuer, was found near the grounds of Deerfield Academy. Police could find no motive.

Mimeograph Heir Slays Wife, Self

Westport, Conn., May 12 (U.P.).—A handsome heir to the A. B. Dick mimeograph fortune shot and killed himself.

State police said they found the bodies of Sheldon Dick, 44, and his wife, Elizabeth, about 40, in the living room of their 20-room home on "Millionaire's row."

The DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

Our Dinah Has Such a Pretty Eye

Tonight between 9 and midnight I'll be at the Silver Spring Armory. Alpha Chapter of Alpha Beta Gamma is sponsoring a Barn Dance for the benefit of the Heart Fund, and I'm going to serve as one of the judges in the Ozark Ike Contest.

Frankly, however, I think I'd rather cast my judicial eye over Ozark's girl friend, Dinah.

MOTHER'S DAY

If all the medals in the world
Were rolled in one today,
And all the scrolls of history
Were placed upon display,
They could not tell the story of
The courage they have shown;
The nearest thing to greatness that
The world has ever known:
OUR MOTHERS

G. A. Fisher,
1442 Spring rd. nw.

THIS IS WASHINGTON

Tom Beesley of the Dorchester House was walking past the lot at Columbia rd. and Mozart pl. nw. the other day when he saw a strange sight.

A pretty little blonde girl, about 7 years old, was trying to teach an Italian lad of the same age (apparently from the Embassy) how to hit a baseball.

Unfortunately, the boy was using a stance and swing that looked like a cross between cricket and golf. And he wasn't doing a lick of good.

Tom, who used to be a reporter and therefore has never learned to mind his own business, volunteered to help. For 15 minutes he delivered an authoritative lecture, punctuated by a visual demonstration of the proper stance, grip, swing and technique.

When he was finished, he said: "Now I'll pitch you a couple, and see how you do."

The boy nodded, and Tom lobbed in a pitch. Bam! The ball went zooming out into Columbia rd. on a fly.

When the traffic light changed, Pitcher Beesley recovered the horsehide and tried again. And again. Biff! Bam! Bop! The ball went whistling to all corners of the lot. Beesley picked up his coat and headed for home.

MISCELLANY

The new clubhouse at the Fairfax Golf and Country Club completes what is undoubtedly one of the finest public courses in the East. It looks like one of those "dream ramblers" you wish you could afford . . . Herb Harris of 1121 N. Kensington st., Arlington, Va., notes that once again National Capital Parks people have seeded short-cut paths worn by people who don't believe in signs—and just as soon as the grass has grown in again, the public will wear new paths . . . The Red Cross office at St. Elizabeth's Hospital wonders if some understanding District Liner would donate a used piano for the hospital's recreation room, where it's badly needed . . . Funds for such "luxuries" are not available, of course . . . Edward R. Place, formerly with the National Wildlife Federation, has been named Director of Community Programs of the National Clean Up—Paint Up—Fix Up Bureau. Ed is probably even better known as the able bass of the D. C. Keys Barbershop Quartet . . . Martin L. Kamerow of 1336 Missouri ave. nw., tells me that Randy's Restaurant at 1113 15th st. nw., features a "Bill Gold Omelet" made of fried lox and onions. Randy probably figures that if they can stand this column they can stand anything . . . Cartoonist Herblock, looking over my shoulder as I write this, advises: "Don't be a fool. Randy's is around the corner from the location of the new Washington Post Building. Be nice to him and after we move maybe you can eat on credit the day before payday" . . . Doris L. Carlin of 716 5th st. nw. commends the thoughtfulness of A. B. & W. driver No. 2, who acts as a "safety patrol policeman" for the schoolkids he picks up on his afternoon run. For the sake of the record, No. 2 is Charles O. Boran, who probably has a friend for every yard of his route . . . Pat Levington of 3612 S. 1st rd., Arlington, Va., reports that the newsie at 14th and K was shouting last week: "Read all about the prisoner murdered in jail" and then, in a lower voice, "You ain't safe no place these days."

GIVE-AWAYS

"Four cute, healthy, housebroken kittens, 8 weeks old." (Lincoln 7-7431 until 1 p. m.)

"Three silver gray and three black kittens, 6 weeks old; very healthy and beautiful." (Hobart 7543.)

"Pedigreed wire-haired terrier and her two 7-week-old part-spitz puppies." (Falls Church 5224.)

YOUNG MAN'S FANCY

In the spring a young man fancies . . . Loud suits and shirts and ties . . . In the spring his Janes and Nancies . . . Find him full of fancy lies . . . In the spring his steps are prancy . . . In the spring he's quite a whiz . . . In the spring a young man's fancy . . . Or, at least, he thinks he is.

Peasants Plan for Red Downfall

By Drew Pearson

A priest with sad eyes stood on a stage in the National Press Building and intoned: "Lord, help thy wandering children to defend and finally redeem our lost freedom."

Mikolajczyk

Before him stood a conglomeration of men from many distant countries—all exiles. Their faces were vaguely familiar, like photographs in an old newspaper. For these were the delegates to the International Peasant Union Congress and included such leaders as Stanislaw Mikolajczyk, who once made headlines as Prime Minister of Poland; Imre Kovacs, secretary general of the once powerful Hungarian Peasant Party; and G. M. Dimitrov, a stormy politician of Bulgaria.

After World War I when this writer spent two years in the Balkans, these peasant leaders were considered socialists and radicals by the then rulers of Bulgaria, Yugoslavia and Czechoslovakia. Later, they came to head the government of their countries as left-of-center parties somewhat similar to the British Labor government of today.

But when Moscow took over, the first thing the Russian commissars did was to line the key members of the Peasant Party up against the wall and shoot them. Moscow recognized the agrarians, like British socialism, to be the greatest threat to successful communism.

So, this week in Washington, about 100 of the exiles who managed to escape staged the International Peasant Union congress, trying to form the skeleton of a "Green Internationale" which some day may overthrow communism in Eastern Europe.

They report that in Hungary less than 1 percent of the farmers have joined the Communist collectives; that a new Buchenwald torture camp is located on an island in the Danube; that the independent peasant of the Balkans is the chief enemy of communism.

Chief hope of these peasant leaders is to get United States backing for internal revolts.

Note—American hero of these exiled leaders is Mark Ethridge, publisher of the Louisville Courier-Journal, who, while studying these Balkan countries for the State Department, was one of the first to see the importance of encouraging peasant independence.

Duck-Loving Jurist

It didn't get into the papers, but a United States District judge, William C. Coleman of Baltimore, served virtual notice on a group of duck hunters recently that they were free to violate Federal game laws as far as he was concerned.

Judge Coleman, who has taken an oath to uphold the laws of the United States, announced that he had more than 30 defendants before his court charged with baiting duck-blinds and that he had agreed with the United States attorney's office that they should not be prosecuted.

"We have a miniature reproduction of what we had in prohibition—an unenforceable law," Judge Coleman told Dr. Clarence Cottam, assistant chief of the United States Fish and Wildlife Service. "I frankly approve of not prosecuting violators of antibaiting regulations.

"Ninety-five percent of the hunting in Maryland is done over baiting," Judge Coleman continued. Then, turning directly to Dr. Cottam, he asked: "And what are you going to do about it?"

The meeting before which he spoke was a gathering of sportsmen and wildlife authorities gathered at Annapolis from Maine to Maryland. New England game experts were shocked at the judge's vituperative statements. They were also surprised at the attitude of Eastern Shore hunters who wanted to keep the duck season open most of the winter.

Judge Coleman was their most vigorous spokesman. He not only wanted the waterfowl season lengthened, but the daily bag increased, and shooting permitted at sundown. Judge Coleman wanted this unrestricted hunting, regardless of Dr. Cottam's explanation that the supply of ducks was not unlimited, that ducks were settling down for feeding at sundown and were mating in January—a period when the judge advocated hunting.

After the stormy session, Dr. Cottam remarked:

"This is the ninth meeting of sportsmen I have had in various parts of the country. All of them have realized that if we have unlimited shooting there soon won't be any ducks left. But this meeting is the most selfish I ever attended."

Republican Spat

Grumbling of Republican Congressmen against their "lacklustre" leadership, has buzzed backstage for some time. But it finally erupted into the open at an uproarious dinner party on Capitol Hill.

The meeting started as a friendly pep session for the coming election campaign. However, Representative A. L. "Doc" Miller of Nebraska injected some unexpected pep by an angry argument with former Speaker Joe Martin, the GOP leader, over the charge that Martin wasn't conferring enough with other Republicans.

Martin and House GOP Whip Les Arends of Illinois were questioned in a friendly way at first. Then Miller suddenly burst out:

"I can tell you what the trouble is—we have poor leadership. If you fellows conferred more with the rest of us the party would be a lot better off."

The former Speaker angrily shot back that he couldn't hold as many conference with House Republicans as he would like to, but that he always kept in touch with them by letters when meetings weren't possible.

"I'm tired of hearing about letters, and about policy meetings in which we taken no part and about statements you issue that do not reflect our views," snapped the Nebraska Congressman.

"It all adds up to poor leadership," he repeated.

"Well, now, if you want to get tough—" bristled Martin.

By this time both men were on their feet glaring at each other.

"That's exactly what I mean," shouted Miller.

Before more nasty words could be spoken, Representative James Dolliver of Fort Dodge, Iowa, moved to adjourn the proceedings.
